U. S. to Pour Millions More Into Homes Construction

Fund for New Buildings and Repairing May Reach Billion.

Authority Asked In Congress Soon

Loan Units Would Lend to Those Denied Elsewhere.

Hundreds of millions of dollars will be made available by the Government for new home construction and modernization under the latest relief program announced yesterday. John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board, who made the announcement, said the sum "may run as nigh as a billion dollars."

Legislation putting the plan into operation is expected to be asked of Congress by President Roosevelt within a few days. The President has let it be known that he is in sympathy with the general purposes of the plan.

Final details of the program were being mapped yesterday at a conference of home loan bank directors with Lewis W. Douglas, director of the Budget, and Tom K. Smith, Treasury banking adviser.

For Owner-Occupants.

Money for building and modernization would be available through the Home Owners Loan Corporation, for improvement of property on which it holds mortgages, and through members of the Federal Home Loan Bank System and Federal Savings and Loan Associations for general improvement and new building.

Improvement and building would be confined to owner-occupied houses. Fahey indicated that about 25 per cent of the total amount would be alloted to the Home Owners Loan Corporation for repair and improvement of houses on which it holds mortgages. He said the number of these houses is expected to reach 600,000.

Congress, Fahey said, will not be asked to make a direct appropriation for the housing program. He said the money can be made available through the Treasury and through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Demand Long Felt.

Ever since the organization of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Home Loan Bank System, there has been a demand for Government money for construction. Thus far these organizations have been allowed to loan money only on existing property and to make such repairs on property on which mortgages are necessary to maintain the value of the property.

In order to make more money

Insull Declared Able to Depart

Meanwhile, Greek Police Ready to Prevent Secret Flight.

Athens, Jan. 29 (AP).—Two doctors appointed by the Greek government examined Samuel Insull today and agreed that the former Chicago utilities operator could travel under medical supervision.

Insull, whom the United States Government twice has sought to extradite to face charges in connection with the failure of the utilities enterprises, has until February 1 to get out of Greece or be deported.

The 77-year-old man had not indicated tonight where he planned to seek refuge next. No other governments have offered him haven and the status of his American passport remained in doubt.

His own physicians have maintained that Insull is suffering from a heart disease and diabetes and that travel would be extremely dangerous.

On this account his counsel had asked a further extension of Insull's permit to remain in Greece from five to fifteen days after the permit expires January 31.

Dr. Nicholas Haniotis and Dr. Andrew Lascaris examined Insull, but said they were unable to reveal the exact nature of their report, which was submitted to the interior ministry.

Greek police, meanwhile, took measures to prevent any attempt by Insull to make a secret flight from the country.

The minister of the interior said he might submit the question of Insull's deportation to the Greek cabinet tomorrow.

"In any case," he said, "we can't deport a man who may die during the voyage as the result of the deportation. That would be a crime."

Postal Theft Case Up Today.

Montreal, Jan. 29 (AP).—Edward E. Schweder, wanted in Huntington, W. Va., on a charge of embezzling $18,000 from the postoffice there, will appear in extradition court here tomorrow.

When Is an Egg Fresh? Senators Ponder Puzzle

Richmond, Jan. 29 (AP).—The question "When is an egg a fresh egg?" baffled General Assembly committeemen today.

Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, of Front Royal, particularly, wanted that question answered by experts who appeared before the Senate general laws committee in the advocacy of an egg grading bill offered by Senator George W. Layman, of Craig.

The bill defined a fresh egg as one having an air pocket—in its larger end—no deeper than one-eighth of an inch.

Jobbers appearing before the committee differed and said an egg is considered fresh until the air pocket reaches a depth of a half inch.

One question led to another, until Senator Weaver asked, "Which came first the chicken or the egg?"

U. S. to Invade 3 More Fields In New Deal

Plans for TVA Model Towns, Moving Idle, and Job Insurance Ready.

By Raymond Clapper.

The Administration, it became apparent yesterday, is preparing to push its program of social reconstruction into new fields.

One field is unemployment insurance. Legislation is being drafted for introduction in Congress, probably late this week, through which Federal tax pressure would be exerted to induce States to set up unemployment insurance funds.

Another field is in the Tennessee Valley experiment which is to be expanded. Officials of TVA revealed yesterday that they are about to organize retail stores and perhaps some manufacturing plants in the seven Tennessee Basin States as nest eggs to stimulate private enterprise in erecting a new modern day civilization in that area.

Plan to Transplant Workers.

In addition the Federal Emergency Relief Administration is planning to move thousands of persons now on relief to other communities where opportunity for work will be greater. For instance, in the coal regions, the Administration believes that no degree of recovery will provide enough jobs to go around as thousands were idle at the peak of the boom. Surplus men in such regions would be encouraged to let the Government transplant them into more promising sections.

Apparently it was a coincidence, but these programs were outlined in different Administration quarters yesterday just as Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury under Herbert Hoover and a Republican Presidential possibility, was gathering his breath for a great keynote effort at Topeka, Kans., last night under the title, "Where do we go from here?"

Mills Skeptical on Utopia.

If the Administration was not seeking to answer Mr. Mills, it offered the answer anyway. It is going forward in President Roosevelt's announced purpose to bring what he described as a "more abundant life" for "the forgotten man."

Mr. Mills said President Roosevelt was leading the country into a Utopia in which men will not be free to plan their own lives, but will be regimented, directed and ruled by an all-powerful state.

The Administration unemploy-

Train Hits School Bus; 10 Children Injured

The wrecked machine "jammed" on the cow-catcher and was carried 500 feet, saving many lives.

Attorney in Insull Case Dies in Canada

Toronto, Jan. 29 (AP).—Edward Bayly, deputy attorney general for Ontario, who has acted as special representative of Cook County, Ill., in seeking to extradite Martin Insull, former Chicago utilities operator, from Canada, died suddenly today of heart disease.

House Passes Money Bill; Awaits Pen

Roosevelt Is Expected to Proclaim 60-Cent Dollar at Once.

Senate 3-Year Limit on 2-Billion Control Fund Retained.

By Robert C. Albright.

Only the routine signature of the Vice President last night stood between President Roosevelt and discretionary power to wield $2,000,000,000 as a stabilization weapon in a new era of managed currency.

Without a dissenting voice, Senate amendments to the unprecedented money bill yesterday were accepted by the House.

Almost immediately, Secretary Morgenthau announced the Treasury was "ready to do business." Currency discussions with Great Britain loomed as the Administration's probable first move under its new powers.

Executive Orders Ready.

At the Treasury, a series of executive orders for immediate operation of the new law were in preparation, as the President awaited the money bill today from the pen of the Vice President. The White House is expected to proclaim the dollar's devaluation at once to a 60-cent level.

House approval of Senate changes in the money legislation followed a White House message to Speaker Rainey. The Speaker was told that Senate amendments restricting operation of the $2,000,000,000 fund to three years and authorizing the President to issue notes against silver bullion were "satisfactory" to the President.

Bent on speedy approval of the Administration's entire program, House leaders swept the money bill to final enactment in 15 minutes, then cleared dockets in preparation for passage today of the Vinson "treaty Navy" bill. Committees meanwhile groomed tax and emergency appropriations legislation for early House action.

Control Demonstrated.

House concurrence in Senate amendments to the gold bill yesterday provided only another demonstration of the President's complete control over that chamber. A single objection would have forced the bill to lie over a day.

Another Administration measure, the Vinson Navy bill, authorizing a $380,000,000 five-year program to build the Navy to treaty strength, today will be pushed to enactment with an amendment, authorizing the President to construct 1,184 new Navy fighting planes.

Hearings will open this morning on the President's estimates for $950,000,000 more for emergency relief, with Harry Hopkins, director of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, answering a crossfire of questions from Democratic

Bodies of 4 Nuns Taken From River

Watertown, N. Y., Jan. 29 (AP).—The bodies of four nuns and the driver of the automobile that carried them to their death in the power canal at Black River, near here, last night, were recovered by divers today.

Working in a temperature of 12 below zero, George Fisher, a diver from Ogdensburg, went down into the canal nine times.

One Slain as Miners Clash With Deputies

Pikeville, Ky., Jan. 29 (AP).—One man was killed and another wounded today in a clash between deputy sheriffs and striking miners of the Edgewater Coal Co.'s mine at Henry Clay.

Fearing further disorder, county officials swore in 15 members of the local National Guard company and sent them to the mine.

Now Wasn't That a Dainty Dish to Set Before the King?

Cambridge, Eng., Jan. 29. (AP) Over roads which once shook to the noble tramp of hoofs of Sir Titmous, esq., today. His mount, Titmous, Esq., today. His mount, however, was no prancing stallion; it was an automobile "in the low-price class."

Nor did Mr. Titmous wear the armored trappings of chivalry; instead, as becomes one who works in a brewery, he wore an everyday business suit.

Thus unromantically arrayed he spurred on, one might say, toward Ely from Cambridge. And beside the historic road, in the best manner of the round-table legends, he found a queen in distress.

He did not know it was a queen, however. All he saw was a large automobile, the chauffeur unable to make it budge.

"I say," said Mr. Titmous, with nonchalance, "having trouble?"

Then he looked again and lost his nonchalance; the passenger in the large car was Queen Mary.

Mr. Titmous explained later that he thought only he "might be able to lend a hand," and added:

"I asked if I could take a message or take them anywhere and the queen decided to come to Cambridge."

Now Mr. Titmous had not intended to go to Cambridge. In fact he was driving away from there at the time, but he gallantly wheeled his car about, assisted her majesty

'Liberty Dead!' Mills Cries, Rallying G. O. P.

Assails Dictatorial Rule of U. S. and Predicts Great Struggle.

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 29 (Spl.). Forecasting the emergency of great issues which will divide men as deeply and as uncompromisingly as any of the great issues of the past, Ogden L. Mills former Secretary of the Treasury, outlined to fellow Republicans, gathered here tonight to celebrate the seventy-third anniversary of Kansas' Statehood, his conception of the changes which the Roosevelt Administration is making in American ufe.

Significance attaches to the address as one of the chief props upon which a future Republican comeback may be constructed. Fears for individual liberty, criticism of the Administration's monetary policy, and tacit approval of both the NRA and the AAA (providing they remain emergency measures and do not become permanent) competed about equally for the speaker's time.

Asserting the Constitution has been suspended and "a government of men without any practical limitations of law has been created," Mills declared "we have to turn back many centuries to the days of absolute autocrats to find so great

"I am opposed to revolutionary change without popular mandate," the former secretary declared, referring to measures taken by the

Was Famous Egyptologist; Wife and Aid Scoff at "Curse" Tale.

Boston, Jan. 29 (AP).—Death today claimed another of those present at the opening of the inner chamber of King Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb in 1923, when Dr. Albert M. Lythgoe, 65, curator emeritus of Egyptian art of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Dr. Lythgoe entered the hospital more than a week ago, suffering from cerebral arterio-sclerosis. His illness gave rise to repetition of the legendary tale that all who had connection with the opening of the tomb in 1923 would eventually fall under the Pharaoh's curse.

While he was ill Mrs. Lythgoe and Herbert E. Winlock, director of the museum, took occasion to discredit the curse story.

Resigned for Ill Health.

Resigning his post a few years ago because of overwork, Dr. Lythgoe vainly sought health in a trip abroad. Since his retirement he has lived in Boston and Pomfret, Conn.

For 20 years, from 1906, when he became curator at the Metropolitan, Dr. Lythgoe was prominent in Egyptian research. The Metropolitan's collection of Egyptian art, largely assembled through his efforts, was described today by Winlock, Dr. Lythgoe's successor, as one of the most important outside of Cairo.

With J. Pierpont Morgan, the elder, who was president of the museum, Dr. Lythgoe spent many winters in Egypt.

He leaves his widow, who was Lucy Tappan Richardson. They were married in Athens, Greece, in 1902.

6 of 40 Have Died.

In characterizing the curse legend as a myth, Winlock recently said that of the 40 persons directly concerned with the opening of the tomb, only 6 had died. Two of these, he said, died of old age.

Winlock was present with Dr. Lythgoe when Herbert Carter and the late Earl of Carnarvon opened the King Tut tomb. Carter still lives and Winlock attributed Lord Carnarvon's death at the age of 57 to the fact that he had always been of frail constitution. Some of those who supposedly fell under the Pharaoh's curse were not even remotely connected with the Carter expedition, Winlock said.

The origin of the legend was attributed by Winlock to the destruction of a canary, which Carter owned, by a snake.

A peasant was quoted by Winlock as saying:

"The serpent from the crown of the king has eaten the golden bird. Bad luck will follow."

Since then, he said, despite the absence of any cursing inscriptions on the necks of alabaster vases or on the sarcophagus of the ancient Egyptian, the legend of the curse has spread.

Volunteer Killed In Mill Town Fire

Tenements Saved in Blaze Razing 8 Buildings.

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 29 (AP). Fire fanned by a wintry gale brought death to one man here today, destroyed eight buildings, including the old five-story, unoccupied Merchants Mill covering a city block, and endangered a thickly congested mill and tenement district. The loss was estimated at $200,000.

William J. Cote, 30-year-old CWA worker, lost his life when a granite wall of the mill crashed on the roof of a shop across the street from the blazing structure. Cote had volunteered his services to help remove the firm's valuables.

Foe Declares The Kingfish "Crawfished"

Pistol Toter Says Huey Took Back Insults in Hotel Set-to.

New Orleans, Jan. 29 (AP).—Ulick Burke, political ward leader, said he went to Senator Huey P. Long's room in a local hotel Saturday to shoot him if he had not retracted insults, assertedly made to Burke over the telephone, and did not discuss jobs as reported by Senator Long in Washington.

In Washington today Senator Long said Burke came to him and "asked about a job for a friend."

"You know Ulic likes pie and we never got off that job subject," Senator Long said.

In Covington, La., today, Burke said:

"If Long says I asked about a job or discussed a job with him he's a liar."

Burke said he went to Long's room after Long had told him over the telephone he did not have the nerve to come there and repeat what he had said over the telephone.

When they were alone in the room, Burke said the Senator told him:

"I want to say this to you. I was drunk when I talked to you over the telephone. Forget what I said. I get drunk and raise all kinds of hell and don't mean what I say."

"We walked out into the private hallway of the suite, where his two bodyguards were seated on chairs. As we passed them I took a steel-jacketed bullet out of my pocket and pressed it into Long's hand, saying:

"I want to leave you my calling card. * * * I was going to get you, Huey. These guys might have got me, but I would have gotten you before they got me.

"When I handed him the cartridge he jumped back and said:

"'My—I don't want that thing. Say, you aren't armed, are you?'

"I took his hand and put it on my gun so he could feel it. His two bodyguards were laughing at him and I was laughing at him."

Burke sad Long has accused him of lining up the old regular organization against him. Burke worked against Long in the recent mayoralty campaign.

Plane Whisks Dillinger East

Indiana Officers Move to Thwart Attempt at Delivery.

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 29 (AP).—John Dillinger, chief of the outlaw gang bearing his name, was bound with irons and rocketed out of Tucson today by airplane in a swift move by Indiana officers to thwart delivery attempts and extradition complications.

Dillinger was taken by Nicholas Makar, chief of police of East Chicago, Ind., and Carroll Holley, an East Chicago special officer, into a plane piloted by Dale Myers, of Tucson, and at 7 p. m. (Washington time), soared eastward.

The destination of the chartered planes was not announced, but was understood to be East Chicago.

New Cabinet To End Graft, Daladier Aim

Young Premier Plans to Curb Corruption, Halt Rioting.

Herriot Sulks; Tentative Line-up Instills New Blood.

Paris, Jan. 29 (AP).—Edouard Daladier, the "strong army" war minister since December, 1932, set out today to weld a broad "clean-up" French cabinet to cauterize corruption in the courts and government, and to end bitter street rioting of recent weeks.

The one-time country school teacher told President Lebrun when he was offered the premiership he would present a ministry before noon tomorrow that would "reestablish the government's authority and the people's confidence in the Republic"—shaken by the Stavisky pawnshop scandal.

That his road will not be smooth was indicated by opposition already offered by Socialists and friends of former Premier Herriot, who was offended because M. Lebrun did not give him a chance to form a government succeeding that of Camille Chautemps.

May Take Foreign Portfolio.

The comparatively young premier-designate, who held the premiership from January 31 to October 24, 1933, may himself take the foreign affairs portfolio from the veteran Joseph Paul-Boncour since the two have disagreed on Paul-Boncour's German policy.

Daladier swept out all but five of the Chautemps ministers in a tentative cabinet drawn up at midnight. The coalition ministry runs between the Neo-Socialists on the Left and the extreme Right group. Holders of the principal posts in the provisional line-up were:

M. Daladier, premier and foreign minister. (Minister of war in the Chautemps cabinet.)

Louis de Chappedelaine—Navy.

Pierre Cot—Aviation. (Retained.)

Joseph Paganon — Public Works. (Retained.)

Guy la Chambre—Merchant Marine. (Retained.)

Pierre Cathala—Colonies.

Francois Pietri—Finances.

Raymond Patenotre—Under Secretary of National Economy. (Retained.)

Henri Roy—Minister of Justice.

Charles Auray—Labor.

Direct Negotiations.

Daladier was believed likely to try to settle Franco-German differences on arms and the Saar basin territory by direct negotiations, rather than by relying solely on the League of Nations, as Paul-Boncour has insisted.

M. Daladier, who is 49, never fa-

Dr. Wynekoop Again Ill; New Trial Feb. 6

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—In the abscence of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, too weak from another heart attack to appear in criminal court, Chief Justice Finnegan today fixed February 6 as the date for a new start of her trial for the murder of Rheta, her son's wife.

Informed the elderly woman was bedridden, Judge Finnegan set the new date.

Norwalk, Conn., Jan. 29 (AP).—Attorney General Homer S. Cummings put aside his official duties today to hurry from Washington to the bedside of his only son, Dickinson S. Cummings, 34, who was injured critically in an automobile accident.

Meanwhile, at the Norwalk Hospital the condition of the younger Cummings was reported as improved.

Lions Battle to Death in Cage While Beatty Holds Off Pack

Cleveland, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Roaring with rage, two big lions fought a battle to the death in Public Auditorium today while Clyde Beatty, trainer, sought vainly to separate them.

Just two hours before the afternoon performance of the Al Sirat Grotto Circus was to begin, Sammy, huge male, attacked a young lioness while Beatty was putting the beasts through a training session.

Locked in mortal combat, the two lions fought in the center of the big cage. The arena was in an uproar. Attendants turned streams from three fire hose on the battling lions, while Beatty, armed with a whip and a pistol loaded with blanks, sought to quiet four other male lions and four tigers in the cage.

Disregarding pleas of attendants to leave the cage, Beatty turned his back on the noncombatants and dove into the thick of the fight. He prodded with his gun, his whip cracked, but Sammy would not loosen the death grip he had on the throat of the lioness. It was not until the female rolled over dead that Sammy released his hold and slunk away.

Beatty herded the other lions out of the cage and into their quarters. Then the well-known trainer went to the basement, removed his perspiration-soaked clothing and climbed into the costume in which he performs.

"Let's go," he said. "It's almost show time."

Britain Ready To Trace Pact On Armaments

Unrevealed Plan Foreseen Favorable to Reich, Against France.

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—Great Britain threw her power into the balance today to break the disarmament deadlock between Germany and France.

A memorandum was transmitted by the government to British envoys in various capitals with the explanation by Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, in the House of Commons, that "the time has come for Great Britain to make known her attitude.

Although official quarters refused to discuss the contents of the memorandum, which will be published this week-end, widespread speculation was aroused and it was said the document might turn out to be one of the most important in recent years.

Leans Toward Germany.

Well-informed quarters indicated that Britain leaned toward Germany, and hinted that the memorandum met Chancellor Hitler's demands at least partly.

"Great Britain has decided it is time to growl before it is necessary to bark," said a well-qualified informant, who indicated the British administration is mainly concerned with the employment situation in Germany which, it was said, forms the background of the Reichs' reasoning.

Sir John told the opening session of the House that the government is determined "to make a further positive contribution, so far as it lies in its power," to promote a disarmament agreement.

It was said authoritatively late tonight that the memorandum is in no way a departure from a British draft convention presented by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald at Geneva last year.

Not a New Departure.

This informant said the document was not so much a new lead or initiative on Britain's part as it was a weighing of opinions in various capitals during the last four weeks.

Because the note was in possession of the German government hours before Chancellor Hitler was scheduled to make a declaration of policy before the Reichstag Tuesday, the German leader's utterances were awaited with great interest in London.

Listening intently to Sir John's

CWA Jobs Halted, Homeless Suffer.

But Worst Is Over, Say Forecasts Covering Wide Areas.

Washington experienced the coldest weather in years last night, but the end of the sudden frigid wave was in sight, the Weather Bureau predicting rising temperatures tomorrow. A low mark of 5 degrees was expected by this morning, as compared with 10 degrees yesterday morning.

At 9:30 last night, the mercury had dropped to 10 and was slowly going down.

Sweeping out of Central Canada and the Great Lakes, the cold wave moved with unusual rapidity to topple temperatures throughout the eastern half of the country from spring-like highs to zero and sub-zero lows in a few hours. In Washington the mercury dropped from 65 to 10 degrees in 13 hours.

The present cold wave, however, is far from a record for the District, although the weather is colder than it has been since 1925. The January 30 low record was made in 1873, with a reading of 6 degrees below zero. The all-time January record is 14 degrees below, made in 1881.

2,000 Homeless Sheltered.

Accompanied by a high wind, the cold wave brought suffering to homeless persons in Washington and other large cities. More than 2,000 homeless men were sheltered last night in the city's missions and in dormitories recently established by the Transients' Bureau.

Temperatures which had dropped below zero in many sections of the country yesterday morning rose only a few points during the day, but the general forecast was that the worst was over, a survey by the Associated Press indicated.

The cold, and fires fanned by icy gales, claimed several lives. Steed Hawley, 21, of Glen Daniels, W. Va., was found frozen to death beneath his wrecked automobile near Stover. Marks in the snow indicated he had

Italians Crash After Sea Hop

Four Span Atlantic, Fall in Brazil; Rescued by Americans.

Fortaleza, Brazil, Jan. 29 (AP). Italy's first attempt to span the South Atlantic with a regular air-mail plane ended in a smash-up on the jungle coast of Brazil before dawn today.

The plane's crew of four men, two of whom were hurt in the crash, was found by an American, Bert Sours, pilot of a Pan-American Airways plane flying its regular run toward the United States.

Sours dropped a note and reported his discovery by wireless to his company. Two rescue expeditions, ordered out by the Pan-American Airways, found the Italians.

The leaders of the flight, Commander Francia Lombardi, 36, and his second pilot, Count Franco Mazzotti, 29, were unhurt, but exhausted. They were taken to a hotel to sleep.

The Italians had swooped across the Atlantic in 13 hours from Dakar, Africa, where they had paused after a fast flight from Rome, which they left Saturday.

They had intended to link their nation's capital to Buenos Aires in record time. They used a land plane, a trimotored Savoia-Marchetti. They aimed for Natal, 300 miles southwest of the spot where they finally came down, 12 miles from here.

Duce Believes U. S. and Japan In Naval Race

Talk of War in Pacific Attributed to Move to Revise League.

By Kendall Foss.

Mussolini has become deeply concerned over the danger of war in the Pacific and what he believes to be a new race for naval supremacy between the United States and Japan, according to private advices just received here.

The race already is on; the danger is at hand; Europe, lost in the muddle she has made of continental problems, has failed to grasp the newer and graver threat to peace.

These sentiments are expressed in a memorandum recently privately circulated among higher government officials in Rome. They supplement various public utterances of the Duce along the same line.

Speculation Rife.

Considerable speculation has been aroused here, seeking explanations for this new Italian preoccupation with questions seemingly remote from Italy. Some believe it designed to support Mussolini's contention the League of Nations needs revision. Others think the Duce is girding himself for the naval conference which may be called for 1935. And there is a school which holds Italy is simply a disinterested friend of peace, anxious to do all in its power to head off armed conflicts.

The memorandum points out that both the United States and Japan are busy building up their navies to treaty strength. Great Britain, it is said, is watching this activity among her competitors for naval power with distinct restiveness. Various attempts have been made by big navy men in London lately to induce the government to increase construction outlays.

Great Britain Next.

In the opinion of the author of the Italian memorandum, it is only a question of time before Britain joins the other two sea powers in a scramble for position.

This country, England and Japan are treaty bound to the famous 5-5-3 ratio, established in 1922 at the arms conference here. The memorandum is not the first to call attention to Japan's evident desire to seek an increased ratio at the first opportunity. This opportunity can come in 1935 if a conference is called. A conference probably will be called if preliminary conversations reveal the possibility of a new agreement; if no prospect of agreement is found, the treaty simply will be allowed to expire in 1936. Then the race will be on in earnest.

Italy's concern with naval strength is in reality a secondary one. Neither Italy nor France subscribed to the London Naval Treaty of 1930, being unable to reconcile their differences. Italy wanted parity with her neighbor; France claimed this was impossible as she had other things to think about besides Italy. Later, the two compromised on a formula which declared the existing disparity would not be increased.

Game of Alliances.

Naturally anything the three major sea powers do will affect Italy's naval relationship to France. This is all she really cares about.

But Mussolini does care very much about the league. He feels it is ineffective as it stands and believes a revison of its constitution giving more authority to big powers would improve its usefulness to the world at large and to Italy in particular. As it stands, the big nation possessing the largest number of docile friends among smaller countries runs the show. France enjoys the friendship of many more little countries than Italy does.

This campaign has met with singularly little success so far. Even Italy's warning that already four out of seven major powers are outside the league and that she herself may withdraw has failed to shake France and England in their belief the league is as effective as it can be. The United States, Soviet Russia, Japan and Germany are the four big nonmembers.

Reason for War Talk.

So anything which tends to show nonmembers are heading toward war is seized upon by Mussolini to add weight to his argument for a league everyone can and will join. A possible Soviet-Japanese conflict is as good grist to the Duce's mill as apprehensions over a coming struggle between Japan and the United States.

Mussolini has called attention to both sources of supposed danger; a possible war in which Germany, the fourth nonmember, could figure has not yet been analyzed in Rome so far as is known.

This may be because, in spite of increasing coolness between Rome and Berlin, there still remains so much common ground that it is deemed inadvisable to jeopardize relations by war talk.

Idle Artists to Get Bal Boheme Work

Will Be Employed on Sets and Properties.

Washington's unemployed artists and artisans will be put to work in preparation for the annual Bal Boheme of the Arts Club, February 13 at the Willard Hotel.

Under the leadership of Miss Anne Fuller Abbott and Hugo Inden, plans for the ball are being formed rapidly. Unemployed professionals will also be used in specialty numbers on a program which is divided into two parts: the Circus Pageant Processional, in three rings, and the Sideshow.

It was explained yesterday that whenever possible, unemployed artists will be used in the construction of the scenery and properties, beginning this week.

The committee on costumes is headed by Mrs. Charles Bittinger, wife of the president of the Arts Club. More than 200 costumes appropriate to the circus theme are being designed.

'Liberty Dead!' Mills Declares; Assails Dictator Rule of Nation

victorious Democrats. "Open discussion and honest criticism are essential to the functioning of democratic institutions."

Criticizing Administration measures, Mills startled his hearers by declaring himself in favor of tariff modification as a long-run substitute for the policies now being pursued by the AAA.

Turning to monetary matters, the speaker declared the prospects for early recovery would be enhanced enormously if the uncertainty over the dollar were removed.

"I am not one who believes it was either necessary or desirable to abandon the gold standard," he said. "I look with dismay upon the repudiation of its obligations by the Government. I have faith in monetary manipulation as a wholesome means of raising prices. But I am enough of a realist to face accomplished facts and not to indulge in futile recriminations. The question is what is sound future policy . . . almost anything is better than uncertainty."

Warns of Hurried Laws.

Asserting the ultimate goal of the Administration is a planned and managed National life, the speaker said it "is the duty of the minority to insist that important measures shall not be adopted until they have been subjected to the tests of critical analysis and open discussion unhampered by intimidation of any kind."

This goal is "incompatible with the principles of individual liberty upon which the Nation was founded," Mills asserted. "These actions definitely violate the letteer and spirit of the Constitution. They abolish the sovereignties of the States. They make of a government of limited powers one of unlimited authority over the lives of all of us. They destroy America's greatest contribution to the cause of human freedom, "the guarantee of individual rights against the arbitrary power of the government."

Declaring this Government was founded on the principle the individual has an inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, Mills charged the Administration, acting through a centralized bureaucracy, is reaching out to the furthest corners of this immense land and regulating the daily life and occupations of the individual.

"Liberty is Dead."

"Liberty is dead," he said. "The whole conception of a planned economy is destructive of the most fundamental principles upon which the American system rests."

"Our ancestors gave their lives to make the individual the master of his own destiny and the State the servant, rather than the master, of the people * * * Are we to destroy this inheritance and tear up the charter of our liberties in the vain hope that a small group of men, selected through political processes, may direct with greater sureness and foresight the life of the Nation than the people themselves?"

Turning to the economic phases of the Government program, mills said there were two clean-cut conceptions: The increase of consumer purchasing power through distribution of funds and the increase of prices by monetary manipulation. Since the sums required for this distribution of funds can not be derived from National income, the Nation is living on borrowed money, has mortgaged its future. This is unsound, but it stimulates an increased demand for goods and, with basic forces of the world working toward recovery, it may help lead to a resumption of normal economic activity, the former Secretary explained to his audience.

Insists Production Is First.

But it is necessary to attain an increased volume of production and employment before wages, costs and prices rise, Mills went on, charging the NRA was seeking to raise wages first and expecting volume to follow. The heavy industries are today, and have been throughout the depression, the weak spot in our economic system, Mills said. Only a revived capital market can overcome the sluggishness of capital goods production, and the capital market can not revive until monetary uncertainty is removed, he added.

Another factor depressing the capital market, Mills found, is the substitution of political control over the Federal Reserve System for the former nonpolitical control.

Turning to Agriculture, Mills said "it is clear we must produce less and sell more." But he added he doubted if bonus payments would permanently reduce production and said he was sure a billion dollar processing tax would reduce consumption.

Unwilling, however, "to accept the intolerable hardships involved in adjusting agricultural production to the needs of domestic markets . . . I prefer to turn my attention to the possibilities, among others, of recovering lost markets."

Modification of tariff policy is necessary if this is to accomplished, Mills stated, adding " this may sound trange coming from an orthodox Republican . . . but I never undertood a ound ytem of production, baed on the difference of the cot of production at home and abroad, to mean the erection of impassable barriers, the destruction of our commerce with the rest of the world and the sacrifice of the efficient farmer to save the inefficient manufacturer."

Gives Eight-Point Program.

In conclusion, Mills enunciated a brief political creed, designed to sum up his address and serve simultaneously as a tentative Republican program. The eight points are:

"I believe in a free press, open discussion and honest criticism as essential elements in the preservation of democratic institutions.

"I am opposed to revolutionary changes without popular mandate and to government by men without any practical limitations of law.

"I believe in our Federal form of Government, with its system of State and local responsibility, as contrasted with a centralized bureaucracy and the powers, rights and duties of the Congress as opposed to executive dictatorship.

"I am oposed to the attempt to reorganize the business and industry of the country by substituting detailed bureaucratic control for in the place of regulated individual control.

"I believe in an economic system based on individual freedom and the maintenance of competition under legal provision by which business and industry may check abuses and promote progress through the formulation of policies for their own guidance, subject to Government regulation based on law.

"I believe an unassailable National credit and a sound and stable currency are indispensable foundations of National prosperity.

"I believe in the future the hardships of unemployment must be mitigated by the development of a soun dsystem of insurance.

"I believe the present dstructive world economic war should be brought to an end by cooperation with other nations, looking to the stabilization of currencies, establishment of common medium of exchange and the promotion of commerce and trade through the reopening of markets that are esstntial to the welfare of our agricultural industry."

Mills concluded his address with the words:

"If, in the formulation of National policies, these principles are steadfastly adhtred to, I can maintain with undiminished strength my faith in the promise of American life."

Plan to Absorb Stranded Idle Gains Impetus

(Associated Press.)

A large range movement to rehabilitate hundreds of thousands of unemployed in communities where industry has stagnated was envisaged by the Administration yesterday in plans to start moving these stranded people to communities where lie new opportunities.

The plan, part of the President's land policy, is to be put into operation by the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation and to carry it on. Harry L. Hopkins, president of the corporation and administrator of emergency relief and civil works, has employed Lawrence Westbrook, civil works and relief administrator for Texas.

Plans for starting the movement are being worked out by a committee headed by Jacob Baker, assistant civil works administrator, on which are Rexford Tugwell and Mordecai Ezekiel, of the Department of Agriculture, and Conrad H. Wirth and Dale K. Parrott, of the Interior Department. Hopkins said yesterday the committee was about ready to make definite recommendations.

$25,000,000 Set Aside.

The plan is to operate first in connection with the purchase of submarginal lands for which the Public Works Administration has alloted $25,000,000 as a starter.

The movement eventually will involve districts where coal, copper and other mines have closed, leaving a stranded population, and large industrial centers where industries have closed leaving thousands out of work who may never hope to return to the jobs they once had. It has been estimated there are at least 1,000,000 people in this situation.

"We have large numbers of families getting relief whose economic future is so discouraging that it seems improbable that they will ever be accommodated again in industry," Hopkins said. "They are in communities where industry has been worked out, such as in the steel centers, to some extent, copper and in some farming country where land is so poor no one could make a living on it.

"As to submarginal lands in contra-distinction to timber land, we find families living on such lands and the Government can not simply go in and purchase their land and have these families just move on and go places.

"What will those people do when they are taken somewhere?" Hopkins was asked.

"They may do two or three things," he replied. "They may work part of the time inside the National forest. Large numbers of men are required for rehabilitation and replanning of Natoinal forests in addition to the CCC men."

"Does the plan take in people in Detroit who have lost out?" was another question.

Go to Small Communities.

Asked where these people could go besides to the forest, Hopkins replied that they could be put "into smaller communities where industries are moving."

"Small industries may be developed around agricultural communities," he explained.

Hopkins said that the whole situation will be explored in an effort to find an intelligent way to do the job, adding "we want to get these people into small self-sustaining communities."

Plans for TVA Model Towns, Moving Idle, and Job Insurance Ready.

ment insurance plan is being drafted by Dr. Isador Lubin, brilliant young economist who is chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. It will be sent to the Capitol toward the end of the week and introduced in the Senate by Robert F. Wagner, of New York and in the House by David J. Lewis, of Maryland.

The plan is simple. It calls for a Federal tax on pay rolls of businesses engaged in interstate commerce. Offsets would be allowed for contributions to unemployment insurance funds set up under approved State laws. More than 40 State Legislatures will meet next year and it is hoped in Washington that many of them will take advantage of the Federal plan. In fact the plan is so neatly devised that employers would be expected to insist upon State legislation, for otherwise they would have to pay the full Federal tax with no deductions.

Would Aid 40,000,000.

The tax method of reaching the problem was adopted primarily for two reasons. One is that it short circuits any possible necessity for a Federal Constitutional amendment to permit the Federal Government to go into unemployment insurance. The other is that it gives each State complete freedom to adopt its own plan or no plan.

Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, outlined the plan in a speech in New York yesterday. With the full backing of the Administration, she visualizes a Nationwide spread of unemployment insurance as protection to some 40,000,000 wage earners who hitherto have for the most part labored under the terrifying fear of being thrown upon charity through no fault of their own. It would, she believes, reduce the charity burdens which in times of depression fall upon communities when they are least able to bear them. It would, she believes, to some extent protext consumer buying power from drying up suddenly in periods of industrial contraction.

Congress Support Expected.

Even Mr. Mills, in his Topeka speech, said he believed the "hardships of unemployment must be mitigated by the development of a sound system or systems of insurance."

Opposition in Congress is expected to be negligible.

The Tenenssee Valley Authority experiment has gone far beyond its original power development. Chairman Arthur E. Morgan and Harcourt A. Morgan, a member of the authority, outlined yesterday plans for developing canneries, grocery stores, drug stores, pottery factories, starch plants, and other prosaic units in a modern civilization. They will work chiefly through two of their incorporated subsidiaries, the Electric Home and Farm Authority and the Tennessee Valley Associated Cooperatives.

Will Set Up "Models."

They are experimenting in manufacture of a low-priced electric stove for heating purposes. Negotiations are going on for purchase of a flour mill. Electric furnaces for extracting phosphorous are being perfected. The City of Norris will be built on a model plan, all under direction of the Federal agency.

The purpose is not to create a Government monopoly of business in the valley but to set up models, get enterprises going, and show how it can be done and then encourage private enterprise to come in.

As the Morgans describe it, a large part of the population there is just sitting around with nothing to do. There are twice the number of people needed for agriculture in that region, they say, and they let their strawberries and cherries go to waste and then buy them canned from distant points in the winter time—those who can afford it.

Scheme Is Country-Wide.

Twenty-five per cent of the farmers have total incomes of less than $500 a year. So that, while TVA officials expect the toes of private enterprise may be stepped on slightly, they hope to find the chief outlet for the valley's Government-sponsored industries in an increased income and increased standard of living. In short, they hope to create a new market and supply it on the spot. So far as possible, they will attempt to stimulate small retail businesses by providing expert accounting, merchandising and management advice. They will sponsor wholesale cooperatives to reduce the cut of the middleman. By such assistance they hope to put the small retailer on a basis of equal competition with the chain store, which supplies such services to its branches.

"And if we succeed in the Tennessee Valley, the plan will spread like wildfire throughout the country," said Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan.

Roosevelt Urged To Seize Industry

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.). Declaring the United States is leading toward chaos and the only means of saving it is to place all industries under martial law, the Rev. James L. Smiley, of Annapolis, today dispatched a message to President Roosevelt, urging him to adopt his plans.

The Rev. Mr. Smiley is rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Chapel, Eastport, and assistant in St. Anne's Church, Annapolis. He also has been a stanch advocate of esperanto, the universal language. Several times he has been a candidate for National and State offices on the Socialist ticket. His message to Roosevelt said:

"Our country is heading toward bedlam. You can save it if you will declare martial law, commandeering all industries and adopt Edward Bellamy's prophetic system of public ownership. Then, under Christ, you will become our social leader."

and Republican members of Deficiencies Appropriations Committee.

Tax Agreement Sought.

At the same time House Ways and Means Committee members will attempt to get a final agreement on a bill plugging $270,000,000 in income tax loopholes, embracing virtually every change recommended by the Administration.

The President's House machine is expected to grind both measures to enactment next week.

Only a brief interchange between Chairman Andrew L. Somers, of the House Coinage Committee, and Representative Louis T. McFadden (Republican), Pennsylvania, marked House acceptance yesterday of the Senate money bill amendments.

McFadden asked an explanation of the Senate alterations, but when Somers offered an explanation, the Pennsylvanian pronounced it "as clear as mud."

At the Treasury press conference which followed, Secretary Morgenthau indicated a first act under his new powers may be to discuss the possibility of a currency agreement with Great Britain.

The Secretary said no negotiations are now under way. He refused to say whether any are in sight, but provided a cue in declaring this was the last time he could answer a question on the subject.

He declined to say what use would be made of the huge stabilization sum in relation to the British equalization fund.

"Oo you anticipate currency warfare?" a reporter inquired.

"I don't know," Mr. Morgenthau replied, but later added:

"It might be too costly to both of us."

"Are the objectives of the two funds at odds?" he was asked.

"I can't answer that," he replied.

Indicating the Treasury is ready to put the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund in operation as soon as executive orders are forthcoming, the Secretary let it be known the United States is prepared to go its own way in monew management if need be.

"I'm feeling very comfortable," he said.

Gold Removal Necessary.

Physical removal of Federal Reserve gold from the Reserve banks i not neceary under the act, he explained to newmen. The gold, he aid, need only be earmarked for the Treaury.

Treatment Precautionary Step, Doctors Say.

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—Melvin A. Traylor, banker, ill with pneumonia, was described by his physicians as "much improved" late today, following administering of serum. The serum was derived from the blood of the banker's wife who had suffered a slight attack of pneumonia before Traylor was stricken.

The banker had rallied earlier, following a serious relapse last night when a heart weakness developed.

Physicians said the serum injected as a precaution and not in an emergency would aid the patient in building up resistance.

Virginia Group Seeks Millions In New Taxes

Minority Report Urging Added Levies Expected in Assembly Today.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Richmond, Jan. 29.—A majority and a minority report in conflict may be submitted to the Assembly tomorrow by a joint committee named to study real estate taxes.

Senator John W. Rust, Fairfax, committee chairman, indicated the majority report would propose equalization of taxes to lift a portion of the burden from real estate owners without suggesting any new sources other than those requested by Gov. Peery.

Delegate Berkeley Adams, Red Oak, however, was said to be preparing a minority report which would recommend a wide range of new taxes intended to yield more than $10,000,000 annually and replace a substantial part of existing real estate levies.

Would Give Schools 7 Millions.

Under the Adams plan, some $7,000,000 of the new revenue would be spent to defray cost of instruction in public schools. Distribution by counties and cities under the plan would include Alexandria, $132,125.94; Charlottesville, $101,378.94; Danville, $138,153.49; Staunton, $43,876.85; Winchester, $79,403.21; Albemarle, $37,275.99; Arlington, $111,344.24; Culpeper, $32,340.55; Frederick, $26,932.75; Fairfax, $79,246.59, and Loudoun, $68,559.82.

The minority report probably will contend that real estate taxes should be based on net income from the property, or ability to pay.

New Taxes Proposed.

New taxes likely to be proposed by Adams and their prospective annual yield will include a tax of $1 per $100 of assessed value of stock in corporations outside the State, $800,000; a pipeline franchise tax, $50,000; an increase of 5 per cent in the tax on net earnings of corporations, $1,900,000; a tax of 35 cents per $100 on bonds of political subdivisions, $29,000; tightening of income tax laws, $1,000,000; a 5 per cent tax on gross revenues of motion picture theaters, $200,000; a provision that banks should collect for the State the existing tax of 20 cents per $100 of bank deposits, $500,000; a license tax of $25 on all physicians, $150,000.

Repeal of income tax deductions for charitable donations, $140,000; a tax of $1.15 per $100 on capital invested in business, $585,000; repeal of income tax deductions for dividends from Virginia corporations, $160,000; increase in the gross earnings tax of railroads from 1½ to 2½ per cent, $912,000; an increase of from 50 to 90 cents in the tax on notes, bonds and other evidences of debt, $910,000; increase from 1⅛ to 5⅛ of the gross earnings tax on public utilities, $836,000, and double existing telephone francise taxes, $255,000.

Two men burned to death when fire destroyed a veterans' club near Troy, N. Y. A girl, 3, died in the flames of her parents' cottage at Hammonton, N. J. Deaths from exposture and traffic accidents were recorded throughout the country.

7 Below at Chicago.

At Chicago, where a low of 7 degrees below zero was recorded, the mercury rose to zero during the day. However, the intense cold prompted the suspension of all CWA work on forest preserve projects, keeping 10,000 men away from their jobs.

Mild relief came to Minnesota, where in some sections a temperature decline of 71 degrees in 36 hours had been reported over the week-end. At St. Paul, where a low of 19 below was reached, the temperature had climbed back to near zero by late afternoon.

Through Wisconsin and the upper Michigan district the cold was slowly abating. The coldest yesterday in that area was at Superior, Wis., with 29 below. In Milwaukee County, 20,000 CWA workers were given a holiday.

Omaha's temperature rose to 14 above, after a drop from 64 above to 3 above. Similar temperature shifts prevailed in most of Iowa.

In Michigan, with the exception of Detroit, subzero weather was general. At Detroit the low was 2 above. Forecasters there said the cold would continue 36 hours.

Heavy Snow in Ohio.

Ohio was digging automobiles and trucks out of snow banks after a temperature drop of 40 degrees had swept the State. The lowest was at Ashtabula, 2 below. At Columbus, Toledo, Cincinnati and Cleveland the decline was halted at 1 or 2 degrees above.

Temperatures were around zero and slightly below in most of West Virginia. At Danville, Va., a low temperature of 12 above was reported and at Winchester the low was 4 above. At Accident, Md., high in the mountains, a temperature of 14 below was recorded. At Oakland, Md., 20 miles to the south, the mercury stood at 5 below.

Serious fires were reported in various parts of the country. Seven firemen were injured as a section stretching half a mile along the waterfront at Brooklyn was destroyed. At Anderson, Ind., fire starting in a bank destroyed half a block in the downtown district. Several firemen and policemen were hurt.

A four-story mill, formerly a cotton textile factory, was destroyed at Fall River, Mass. Wrightsville Beach, a summer resort at Wilmington, N. C., was the scene of a $500,000 blaze, in which a third of the buildings were destroyed.

Five apartment houses were damaged by fire in Baltimore and more than a dozen persons were rescued.

Near Zero at Winchester.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—A 62-degree drop in temperature here during the 24 hours ended at 8 o'clock this morning was reported by the Winchester Research Laboratory. The mercury stood at 4 degrees above zero here today. In the mountains 15 miles west of here, the thermometer registered 2 below.

Indications late today were that the mercury would sink lower tonight. State police reported traffic hampered.

Telephone Lines Damaged.

vored the payment of the French war debt to the United States, but has kept his ear to the ground for a change in the parlimentary sentiment that forbade fulfilling the obligation.

He is seeking a ministry of new blood and one supported by parties between the Socialists on the left and the Tardieu or Marin groups on the right.

Budget Difficult Problem.

Daladier was said to be seeking a strong finance minister to replace Georges Bonnet. Worries over the French franc and budget deficit will dominate his consultations with financial experts.

The treasury announced tonight a recent government loan will close tomorrow with a subscription of 3,500,000,000 francs.

M. Herriot's trip to America nearly a year ago upon President Roosevelt's invitation widened the breach between him and Daladier. They represent opposite wings of the radical Socialist party.

Women school teachers and hundreds of public employes joined the rioters, protesting against pay cuts. Twenty-five leaders were arrested.

and a lady-in-waiting to enter, and returned to the university town.

Queen Mary, who was out on a shopping tour in quest of antiques, was expected in Cambridge and a crowd had gathered in front of the antique shop where she was to do her buying.

A policeman was on duty. When the little Titmous sedan drew up in the parking place he imperiously waved it away.

Then he, too, looked again and changed his wave to a salute.

He opened the door, Queen Mary and her attendant alighted and entered the shop, and Mr. Titmous drove away.

Some thoughtful bystander noted down the license number of the sedan and soon Mr. Titmous was overwhelmed with questioners.

"Well," said the knight of the old Cambridge road, "her majesty was very grateful and expressed her thanks personally. She was intensely amused at the little adventure which had befallen her and her lady-in-waiting."

It was all Sir Launcelot—horse, armor, and all—could have done.

3 of Chilean Nitrate Ships Go to Norfolk

Russian, Japanese Ports Likely to Get Large Part of Tonnage.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—At least 3 of 14 ships chartered to transport nitrate from Chile will deliver their cargoes at Norfolk, it was announced today by John T. Campbell, president of the National Stevedoring Co. This company handles all Chilean nitrate landed at Norfolk and Baltimore.

Campbell said he did not know where most of the ships would unload. He said it was probable that Russia and Japan would get a considerable supply of the huge tonnage the ships would load at Tocopilla and other Chilean ports.

"None of the vessels will know where they are going until they reach Panama," he said. "Their skippers will get orders there and will proceed from that point to their destinations."

He said approximately 45,000 tons would be brought to Norfolk and Baltimore during the next few months.

The Grace line steamer Santa Rita is due here tomorrow with 2,000 tons, and will be followed on February 2 by the Norweigian steamer Alaska, also with 2,000 tons. The Norwegian Fordefjord is due early next month.

Other ships ordered to Chile to load nitrate include the Norwegian Sfiint, Primero, Knut Hamsum, Romsdalshorn and Tilthorn; the British Levenbridge Fife, Hartside, Induna and Marthara, and the Swedish Faxem. Some of these vessels have been idle for three years, and sudden chartering for transporting nitrates hase caused speculation in shipping and Government circles.

Campbell stated that some of the nitrate to be brought here will be shipped to ammunition plants, but a great deal of it will be converted into fertilizer. He says there is a great scarcity of nitrates in the United States at present principally to shipments from this country to Japan and the Far East during the past two years.

Campbell said he did not know who chartered most of the fleet of 11 ships reported as being ordered to Chile ot load nitrate.

Farley Enters Burned Papers Mystery Today

Will Tell Senators About Air Mail Files in Brown's Black Bag.

By Martha Dalrymple.

Armed with the missing Postoffice Department records which his predecessor delivered to him personally two weeks ago, Postmaster General Farley will appear today before the Senate committee investigating air mail contracts.

According to evidence presented before the committee, these records, which will finally make their appearance under Farley's arm, have had a checkered career.

Witnesses have testified that former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown ordered certain correspondence burned a few days before he left office on March 4 last.

Shortly after this revelation, Brown arrived in Washington with a bulging black bag, the contents of which he said contained two files, labeled "Merchant Marine" and "Air Mail," which he charged had been maliciously placed among his personal documents by someone engaged in a campaign of "character assassination."

The records and a long explanatory letter Brown delivered personally to his successor, Farley.

Glover's Papers Also Sought.

Today Farley is expected to reveal the contents of the returned records and to tell the committee whether they contain all the official correspondence which has been reported missing.

Although witnesses have testified that former Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover also ordered his office files burned before he left office along with the rest of the Hoover Administration, none of these documents have reappeared.

Glover's secretary testified that the records burned were only "personal and confidential" and that strictly official correspondence was sent to another office for filing.

Farley will be questioned about these records, and is expected to reveal the exact amount of normal official correspondence relative to ocean and air mail contracts that he found in his department when he took office.

Will Quiz Farley on Plane Ride.

A few weeks ago Republican members of the committee asked Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman, to summon Farley in order to question him about an air trip he took to Texas last October. The minority members said they understood the Postmaster General used a plane belonging to a company enjoying a mail contract.

However, at that time they agreed to postpone their questioning until Farley was summoned in the course of Black's program of investigation.

Black does not intend to question Farley today concerning his opinion of the subsidy policy nor about what what the Postmaster General thinks of its administration in the past. But the witness will probably be recalled, when the inquiry is more nearly complete, to give his opinion about what should be the future Federal policy regarding mail contracts.

Postoffice employes will also be among the day's witnesses.

Collector Charges Fraud in "Bargain" Valued at $100,000.

Alleging he had been induced to pay $14,000 for a stamp collection purportedly worth $100,000, but which, he claims, is worth only a few hundred dollars, Carl Percy, 10 Park avenue, New York City, yesterday asked District Supreme Court to impound the $14,000, which is in a local bank, and rescind a contract which he entered into with P. H. S. Cake, 1431 Chapin street northwest.

Percy declared he was interested in collecting "rare, antique and obsolete stamps" and that his interest in the hobby led him to advertise in a New York paper last September.

He secured from Cake, he said, a reply which informed him a collection worth $100,000 could be purchased at a greatly reduced figure. After negotiations, Percy agreed to pay $14,000, and the stamps were shipped to New York, where the money was paid.

Five days ago, the purchaser said, he discovered the stamps were "fraudulent, altered and false." He now asks his $14,000, which is in the Hamilton National Bank, be returned to him and that sale agreement be canceled.

Bremer Kidnaping Hunt Revives Hope

Word From Abductors Is Expected Shortly.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 29 (AP).—A new attitude of optimism prevailed today as his family remained alert for word from the kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer, 37, banker, seized January 17 for $200,000 ransom.

Walter Magee, wealthy contractor and friend of Bremer, who received the first ransom note a few hours after the kidnaping, hinted fresh developments were a possibility soon.

"I am optimistic," said Magee, "that we will hear something within the next few days. The appeals by Adolph Bremer, father of the missing man, and assurance that the ransom is ready for payment to the gang as soon as authentic word is received ought to bring some results soon."

remarks in the diplomatic gallery were the ambassadors from Germany and Italy. England has sought a four-power conference with these governments and France participating.

Discussion of finances, including war debts, and a possible tariff war with France, also came to the fore on the floor of Commons as Parliament opened.

Decided Time Is Ripe.

After diplomatic exchanges with France and Germany, the foreign secretary said, the government had decided the time was ripe to take a public stand on "the present situation, the gravity of which must be apparent to every thoughful mind."

Later, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald said the government had made it "their earnest endeavor to secure parity for the principal air powers at the lowest level at which an international agreement can be secured."

The prime minister was replying to a question concerning the reputed decision of the United States, Soviet Russia, Japan, Belgium and Switzerland, to strengthen their air forces.

Cheers greeted Sir John's statement that the government intended to make its disarmament attitude known, but he declined to go further into the matter.

France Threatened.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, financial secretary to the treasury, said Great Britain is ready to resume negotiations on the war debts question "whenever, after consultation with the President of the United States, it may appear that this can usefully be done."

To return to the gold standard at this time, the secretary added, would be inappropriate."

Commons was informed France has been notified "that Britain will very reluctantly have to take immediate retaliatory action" in view of the new French import quotas.

Unless the quotas in force before January 1 are restored to their original level, London would impose additional duties on a wide range of French products, it was said.

CWA Lay-Off Here Feared

$18,000 Asked to Avert Suspension Thursday at Play Centers.

In order that work may be continued on the Takoma and Banneker Recreation Centers and 11 other projects, the Office of National Capital Parks yesterday requisitioned the Civil Works Administration for $18,000 to be spent for materials and supplies.

Of this total, $3,000 is for truck hire. Unless an allotment is made, approximately 200 drivers and helpers will have to be laid off, starting Thursday. Sufficient funds remain only for their employment today. Tomorrow is a holiday, under Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' recent 24-hour week ruling for CWA mechanical labor.

The $18,000 asked would carry the office through February 7, said Superintendent C. Marshall Finnan.

Because of the cold weather, only small forces reported for work yesterday at the two recreation centers. Pouring of concrete had to be suspended on account of the low temperature.

"Bogus" Money Passed in Four District Stores

Georgia Avenue Merchants Victimized in Rapid Succession.

A lone counterfeiter, working with calm precision, is believed to have passed large sums of fake currency on merchants along upper Georgia avenue over the week-end, and last night was sought by Federal and local authorities after banks and business houses were warned.

In rapid succession the counterfeiter, described as well dressed and young, passed his imitation money at four chain grocery stores on Georgia avenue. In one case he made a purchase. In the others he simply requested change.

The bills were of $20 denomination. Police said they were manufactured by experts and extremely hard to detect. The only omission is the fine silk thread in the paper.

On each bill the name of Andrew W. Mellon, as Secretary of the Treasury, and W. O. Woods, a Treasurer of the United States, appears.

C. H. Allen, of the United States Secret Service, was called into the investigation, and interviewed store managers.

The counterfeiter entered the stores in the middle of rush hours, waited until a clerk was busy, then approached and asked for change, it was said.

U. S. to Pour Millions More Into Homes

Fund for New Buildings and Repairing May Reach Billion.

available to Federal Savings and Loan Associations, it was indicated the Government probably will liberalize the terms under which it helps finance these concerns. At present the Government may buy 50 per cent of the stock of such associations, with a limit of $100,000 in any one concern. Fahey said the percentage of stock which the Government may buy probably will be increased.

Loans for new home construction will be governed largely by the rules of the local lending organizations and State laws. The rule that the Home Owners Loan Corporation may hold a mortgage up to 80 per cent of the appraised value of a home will hold good in making loans for modernization and repairs, but it was pointed out that such modernization would immediately increase the appraised value and therefore increase the amount of possible Government financing.

Amount Needed in Dispute.

Fahey said the amount of demand for new-home construction is a highly controversial subject, but that there is no question that there is a great demand for repairs and modernization of homes. The NRA has estimated there is a shortage of 750,000 to 800,000 homes in the United States. During the average year 400,000 homes are built in the country. Last year only 50,000 homes were erected. However, there is a question of whether there is a great demand for new homes in spite of a theoretical shortage.

Fahey pointed out that home construction will provide considerable employment in an industry where employment is at the lowest ebb and that it will create a demand for capital goods. It is estimated that less than 25 per cent of the persons normally employed in building industry are working in that industry now.

It was stressed that the Government will not participate in any speculative home-building or in apartment-house construction.

"The need for home financing this year may exceed the capacity of private capital," Fahey's statement said. "For the benefit of home owners, therefore, the board is prepared to recommend three general measures.

To Expand Credit.

"The first is to expand credit resources of priate home-financing institutions by increasing the volume of funds available through membership in the Federal Home Loan Bank System. The second is the active development of the Federal Savings and Loan Associations as private thrift institutions in communities where home financing resources are lacking or insufficient. These two steps embrace at least nine out of every ten home owners in this country, which are financially entitled to loans from home lending agencies unwilling or unable to make loans.

"The third proposed step would be to enable the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, which deals only with home owners, who are in difficulty with their present mortgages, to finance desirable improvements on those homes on which it makes these emergency loans.

One Out of Ten.

Such properties do not represent more than 1 house out of 10, and possibly not more than 1 out of 20, in this country, but the resulting expenditures for modernization would add to the value of such properties and create healthy activity in the building trades, in addition to the steps which would be taken by other home owners through the Federal Savings and Loan Associations and other members of the Federal Home Loan Bank System.

"The Federal Government is deeply concerned in amplifying the resources of private home-financing institutions, so that they may continue to lend money on good security. It has refused to compete with private institutions in the home mortgage business. It does not make direct loans to the vast majority of home owners, but only to those who are unable to finance their indebtedness elsewhere. The board feels that home owners should make the utmost possible use of existing private home mortgage institutions."

CHRYSLER leaps ten years ahead!

AFTER ten years of courageous pioneering, Chrysler now pioneers again . . . bringing to the world a motor car so advanced that it literally creates a new form of travel.

The new Airflow* Chrysler seems actually to ignore the road it runs on. It takes any kind of road at any rate of speed as serenely as if it were cushioned on air.

Dynamic Balance

This marvelous Floating Ride is made possible by scientific application of dynamic balance. All important weights have been redistributed.

The engine is over the front axle. The passengers are suspended at the center of balance . . . 20 inches forward of the rear axle. You'll realize what that means if you call to mind the old-fashioned beam-type scale . . . with the beam suspended exactly at the center of balance. As the beam swings, the ends move in a wide arc . . . but the center scarcely moves at all.

In the Airflow Chrysler, you ride with a minimum of motion at the center of balance . . . and in addition there are two other factors that contribute to the Floating Ride.

THE CENTER OF BALANCE MOVES LEAST

The action of the front springs is entirely independent of the rear. And the "periodicity"—or rate of movement—of the springs has been slowed down to a point that science proves to be most agreeable to human nerves.

The result is an effortless ease of motion beyond anything you have ever experienced in any kind of vehicle.

The World's Safest Car

The Airflow Chrysler is the world's first true "ride-inside" car. The all-steel body and frame are a single unit. Part of the frame is actually over your head. You ride inside a rigid bridgework of steel girders.

This strong Airflow body also makes possible a car as spacious as a drawing room. Front and rear seats are like divans . . . both have plenty of room for three. And there is a big inside luggage compartment back of the rear seat.

Airflow also provides for the perfect ventilation system . . . with clear vision, maximum air control, and no wind roar.

Befitting a car so modern and advanced, the interiors are wholly new. The roof makes use of a new material . . . dustproof, washable, strikingly beautiful.

No description however can quite convey to you what the Airflow Chrysler is like . . . you must see it and ride in it . . . that alone can give you the story.

Co-Op Attains 3-Year Goal With Milk Pact

Richmond Body Successful in Stabilization of Market.

Richmond, Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Three years of effort by the Richmond Cooperative Milk Producers Association for machinery to stabilize the Richmond milk market was brought to a successful conclusion when the AAA milk-marketing agreement became effective for the Richmond area.

This agreement provides for establishment of a Richmond milk board, composed of two representatives of the association, two representatives of the milk distributors, and a representative of the general public, who acts as chairman. The board acts on matters involved in the production and distribution to the Richmond consumers of pure milk at reasonable prices. The board has stabilized the Richmond market for the benefit of all, and the cooperative association has been an important factor in the success of the milk board.

The Richmond association was established in 1930, growing out of the efforts of the old Farmers Milk Producers Association to improve returns for milk shipped to Richmond. The cooperative was incorporated under the Virginia cooperative marketing act to sell milk produced by its members. By September, 1930, nearly 200 dairymen scattered in the 24 counties comprising the Richmond milk shed had signed the agreement, turning over to the association the responsibility for selling their milk. In November, the board of directors engaged F. A. Buchanan, extension dairyman from V. P. I., as manager.

Negotiations were immediately begun with the milk distributors of Richmond to sell them the member's milk. The distributors agreed to take the milk and remit to the association brokerage of 3 cents per hundredweight, as provided in the agreement.

The association, however, was unable to induce the distributor to increase the price paid the producers in order to help cover the additional costs occasioned by the drought. Nor could they induce the distributors to redetermine the basic allotments of class I milk used for fluid consumption purposes and paid for at a higher price than class II and class III milk used for the manufacture of dairy products on a uniform basis for all producers on the market.

Leased Own Plant.

In order to improve its bargaining position and provide a market at all times for class II and III milk produced by its members, the cooperative leased a plant and installed equipment to convert this milk into dairy products. During 1932 the association reached an agreement with the major distributors on two matters. The major distributors agreed that the basic allotments of class I milk to every producer which they as distributors had established, would not be changed except on pro-rata basis by agreement with the association. It was further agreed that the prevailing prices would be maintained and would be changed only by agreement with the association.

In addition to these services, the association has provided its members with check testing and butterfat test of each member's milk, made by the distributor as the basis of paying the producer. The co-op has also checked weights delivered by the members, so producers are confident they are receiving full value.

Obstacles Confronted.

The association was confronted, during the first three years of its existence, with the general decline in prices which carried milk prices down, and the curtailment of consumer purchasing power caused by the depression which materially cut the volume consumed. Prices had to be reduced in order to maintain even the curtailed consumption, and the reduction of prices and basic allotments caused a number of producers to undertake distribution of their own milk.

The association used its efforts to restrain this increase in the number of distributing organizations on the Richmond market because the studies showed costs of distribution are materially increased by numerous small distributors on the same market.

When the AAA went into effect early in the summer of 1933, the cooperative took the initiative in trying to improve the condition of its members and the other dairymen by negotiating a milk market agreement. This agreement went into effect December 20, 1933, and provided an increase of approximately 4 cents per gallon in the price paid producers for Class I milk, with a redetermination of the basic allotments of Class I milk among the various producers by the milk board. The price to consumers was raised 1 cent per quart.

Members of its executive committee of the board are Samuel R. Carter, C. M. Cease and J. G. Jefferson. With the former manager, F. A. Buchanan, they have borne the brunt of the work of negotiations leading to stablization of the Richmond milk market.

Restoration of Historic Fort Frederick Urged

Above is a view of Fort Frederick taken from a plane. It was first used as a frontier fortress during the French and Indian Wars, later during the Revolutionary War as a place to keep British prisoners and was occupied during part of the Civil War by Union troops. A movement has been started to have the fort restored.

Museum Also Planned at Anti-Revolutionary Maryland Shrine.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.). Restoration of Fort Frederick, the only military monument of the ante-Revolutionary times remaining in Maryland, located on a bluff overlooking the Potomac River, 15 miles west of here, will be urged as a CWA project by the Chamber of Commerce and historical and civic organizations here.

Under the program urged, the old fortress, whose original walls are still standing, would be restored to its original appearance, with its huge entrance gate, together with models of hinges and type of timber used when it was erected in 1755. Foundations of officers' quarters, which have survived nearly two centuries, also were discovered inside the walls. It is the plan to use these foundations for a museum building.

The stone walls of the fort are 4½ feet thick at the base, 3 feet thick at the top, and 20 feet high. The fort was 120 feet long and accommodated 300 men.

Rites There 3 Years Ago.

Three years ago, the fort was the scene of the 175th anniversary of its building. The celebration was attended by members of the Maryland State Society and Daughters of the American Revolution which society has done much in beautifying the fort grounds.

It was one of the group of forts that reached as far North as Ticonderoga and South into Virginia. Fort Frederick was one of the few forts built of stone. The others have long ago fallen into decay.

These forts became necessary during the French and Indian wars from 1754 to 1763, when the Northern and Western tribes of Indians fell upon the settlers of the then Western frontier of civilization.

Gov. Sharp Urged Fort.

Word of these massacres reached Gov. Horatio Sharp at Annapolis, and he set out for what was then known as Frederick County, recruiting men along the way. Upon his return to Annapolis, Gov. Sharp asked the Colonial Legislature for an appropriation for a strong fort to be erected in the western part of Frederick County, which was eventually granted. Upon receiving the grant of money, the governor stated, according to his correspondence:

"I am preparing to set off for the frontier, to put this province in the best position of defense that the bill will permit me, and construct a strong fort, and blockhouses for protection of the North Mountain. While I was in Fort Frederick, Col. Washington paid me a visit and informed me that he was also raising a strong fort at Winchester. We already have 200 men near and about Fort Frederick under Col. John Dagworthy. We faced the bastions and curtains with stone and shall mount on each bastion a 6-pounder. Since I left Fort Frederick we have received advices that a party of French and Indians have reduced and burned Fort Granville on the Juniata. My people see the expediency of my building Fort Frederick of stone."

For about two years the state of alarm over the many raids by Indians continued until Fort Duquesne was reduced in 1758. During this time, Fort Frederick was the base for military supplies and a refuge for inhabitants.

Leased in 1762.

After the French were driven from the Monongahela, the Indians retired also, and for a time gave up the warpath. Gov. Sharp leased the farm upon which the fort was located to Henry Heintzman in 1762, retaining the right to occupy the fort whenever necessary.

It was not until the Revolutionary War days that the fort came into prominence again. It was at the fort that British prisoners were incarcerated. For a time these prisoners were hired out to farmers in the vicinity. It was while these prisoners were at Fort Frederick that a plot was hatched with some Tories to betray the Continental Army, but the plot was discovered when papers were passed to the wrong man in Frederick. The ringleaders were arrested, taken to Fort Frederick, tried, and many of them hanged.

At the close of the Revolutionary War, the prisoners at Fort Frederick were marched to Baltimore and there placed upon a vessel for England. A number, however, decided to cast their lot in the country surrounding the fort, and there settled. Their descendants are among the best-known residents of Washington County.

Sold in 1791 for $375.

It was in 1791 that the fort was sold at auction to Robert Johnson for $375, thus ending its Colonial service.

Little was heard of the fort until 1861, when the Civil War broke out. Union troops occupied Fort Frederick, they being the First Maryland Regiment under Gen. John R. Kenly. Several spirited fights occurred as the Confederate forces tried to seize the fort. When the First Regiment was sent elsewhere, the fort saw its last military service.

A bill was introduced in the Assembly four years ago for an appropriation to restore the fort, but the session was adjourned before it could be voted on. It was estimated the fort could be restored for $15,000. A forest has been started around the fort, and it is the present intention to make it a National shrine.

Changes Seen In Income Tax In W. Virginia

Payments Due Tomorrow on Gross Levy Now Warmly Opposed.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Lawyers, banks and citizens over West Virginia predict the new State gross income tax, payable by Wednesday, will be revised by the Legislature, and some believe it will be abandoned altogether.

It is contended the tax has failed as a revenue producer, and that the storm of protest will mean its end. The tax is 1 per cent of all gross incomes above $600 for single persons and above $1,000 for married persons with exemptions of $200 for each dependent.

Fred L. Fox, State tax commissioner, says that the yield from May 26 will be only $1,400,000, while the expense of collecting the tax will be $1,250,000. He holds that while the act became effective last May 26, it affects the whole calendar year. Opponents hold, however, that it can not be made retroactive.

Effort was made in the Legislature before its recess to February 5 to extend the payment time to March 1, pending action on a bill revising the tax to a net income tax half that paid to the Federal Government. A resolution to that effect was passed by the House of Delegates and sent to the Senate, where it was defeated on the ground that a statute could not be repealed by resolution. Meanwhile, the House had passed the bill repealing the old law and substituting the net tax. When it went to the Senate, that body held that even should the old tax be now revised or repealed, it could not be made retroactive as to the 1933 payments. The Senate is yet to act upon the repealer, and it was for this reason that the payment time extension was sought.

Meanwhile, the Senate Judiciary Committee has arranged public hearings February 6 and 7 on bills declaring a moratorium on forced sales of property and prohibiting assessors from succeeding themselves.

Conley Boomed As Ritchie Foe At County Rally

Frederick Physician and Others Play "Perpetual" Office Holding.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.). Dr. Charles H. Conley, well known physician, was indorsed for Governor to succeed Albert C. Ritchie at a largely attended meeting of Democrats in Winchester Hall. A "Conley for Governor Club" with 877 members was formed.

Dr. Conley announced his candidacy some time ago, the first competing to succeed Ritchie, who has held office four terms.

Officers of the club are: President, William J. Grove, member of the Democratic State committee; vice president, Mrs. Alice Rohrback, of Braddock Heights; H. Jewett Orth, of near this city, and R. Lynch Gross, of Brunswick; secretary, Samuel H. Rosenstock, of near this city; treasurer, Albert N. McCardell, of here; executive committee, Eli Charles Renn, Ballenger; Harry Wood, New Market; Howard Smith, Braddock; Edwin Fink, Walkersville, and Ray R. Taylor, Thurmont.

Rohrback on Committee.

A committee composed of D. Princeton Buckey, member of the Frederick bar; former State Senator Jacob Rohrback, Edward M. Akers, John W. Metzer, Harry C. Allgire, LaFayette L. Carpenter, Mr. Grove and Mr. Rosenstock was appointed to draft a constitution.

Mr. Grove was chairman of the meeting. Speakers included Mr. Grove, Mr. Rohrback, Alban M. Wood, former Mayor Allgire of Brunswick; Mr. Cardell, Samuel Bast, Braddock; Charles Ranneberger, Buckeystown; Charles Kreh, Mrs. Alban M. Wood, this city, and L. Wethered Barroll, a Baltimore attorney.

Mr. Buckey said the time has come when Gov. Ritchie should step down. Mr. Rohrback described Dr. Conley as "faithful to the principles of Democracy and one who will be faithful to trusts." Mr. Wood declared the renomination of Gov. Ritchie for the fifth term would "drag down the Democratic party in Maryland and a Republican would be elected." He denounced "perpetual office holding."

Charges "Monarchy."

Dr. Conley said there has been a "perpetuation of the monarchial form of government in Maryland for fifteen years but Maryland may know now that at least one man has the courage of his conviction to come forward and say he would like to be governor." He said he will outline his platform later, and that the counties will determine the next nominee for governor.

Dr. Conley is a son-in-law of the late Gen. L. Victor Baughman, for years a leading figure in the councils of the Democratic party in the State. Dr. Conley was formerly chairman of the county committee, a member of the State committee and has long been active in party affairs. He resides at Guilford, his country home, near here.

Webster Smith Asks Maryland Governorship

Baltimore Attorney Seeks G. O. P. Nomination Over 3 Others.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—H. Webster Smith, Baltimore attorney and for three years chairman of the City Public Improvement Commission, today became the fourth candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Under the present set-up, he will oppose Harry W. Rice, another Baltimore lawyer; Walter E. Quenstedt, Annapolis mayor, and former Representative John Philip Hill, of Baltimore.

Political observers, however, believe the field will be broadened to include Oliver Metzerott, of Prince Georges County, minority floor leader of the House of Delegates, and Harry T. Phoebus, Somerset County Circuit Court clerk.

Conley Opposes Ritchie.

Dr. Joseph N. Conley, of Frederick County, is the only avowed aspirant for the Democratic nomination. Governor Ritchie thus far has been noncommitttal.

Although Smith is little known in southern Maryland, he has been much in the limelight in Baltimore and is credited with saving the city thousands of dollars during his term as public improvements commission chairman. He also was prominently associated with the recent activities of the Federal Reserve Board in Washington in reorganization of the Union Trust Co.

Cites "Numerous Requests."

His formal statement said:

"I have been honored with numerous requests from active Republicans, Independents and Democrats, including the Nonpartisan League of Maryland, to become a candidate for Governor. I am happy in the thought that these requests have been entirely unsolicited and originated in an earnest desire on the part of a large number of our citizens to have the opportunity to vote for a candidate for Governor who they believe will administer the affairs of state primarily and solely in the interest of the taxpayers.

"I am frank to say I would like to be Governor of Maryland * * *

"I will wage a vigorous campaign. There will be no pussyfooting. I propose to call a spade a spade and, win or lose, I am in the fight to a finish."

Early History of Shenandoah County Revealed In First Court Book, Found After 150 Years

Father of John Marshall, as First Clerk, Describes Organization.

Volume Discovered in Old House on Estate of E. D. Henkel.

By A. R. O'Roark.

New Market, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Lost records of the early days in Shenandoah County have been revealed in an old book discovered on the estate of Elon O. Henkel, here.

It is the first minute and order book of the Shenandoah (then Dunmore) County court, and covers the court's activity prior to the time records at Woodstock began.

Mr. Henkel plans to present this valuable link with the past to the Shenandoah court.

Written by Thomas Marshall, first clerk of the Dunmore courts and the father of John Marshall, first Chief Justice of the United States, the record begins with establishment of the court May 26, 1772, shortly after the House of Burgesses at Williamsburg formed Dunmore County from Beckford Parish.

Book Well Preserved.

How it came to the attic of an old wash house on the Henkel estate here, 20 miles from the county seat at Woodstock, is a mystery. The volume is unusually well preserved. It was found by this writer in an examination of old records and letters.

The book throws much light on hitherto unknown events of the first two years of the county's existence, and corrects many errors.

Reading from the first yellowed pages, it is found that: "At the Town of Woodstock in the County of Dunmore the Twenty sixth day of May in the Twelfth year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Third by the Grace of God of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King Defender of the faith &c., annoque Domini MDCCLXXII,

"A Commission of the Peace for the said County directed to Burr Harrison, Taverner Beale, Joseph Pugh, Francis Slaughter, James McKoy, Henry Nelson, and Abraham Keller, of the Quorum, John Tipton, Caleb Odell, Jonathan Langdon, Abraham Bowman, William Moore, George Ruddell, Jacob Holman, and Alexander Macker, Gentlemen, and a Dedimus Potestatem for Administering the Oaths & both bearing date the seventeenth day of April last past, was openly read . . ."

Oaths to King Described.

There then follows a description of the induction of these men, first justices of the newly formed county, into office, and of their subscription to the various oaths of allegiance and supremacy of the British Crown as prescribed by Act of Parliament.

Reading further there is found recorded in the small and firm hand of Marshall:

"At a Court held for Dunmore County at the Court House in Woodstock the Twenty sixth day of May . . . Thomas Marshall Gent. produced a Commission from Thomas Nelson Esq. Deputy Secretary of this Colony, to be Clerk of this County Court which was openly read, and thereupon the said Marshall took the usual oaths to his Majestys person and Government, and . . . then took the oath of his said office of Clerk."

"Taverner Beale Gent produced a Commission from his Excellency the Governor," and was duly inducted into the office of first "high sheriff" of Dunmore. "Edwin Young, George Rice, and William Bullet," became his "undersheriffs," Peter Hogg Esq. was his Majesty's first "Deputy Attorney for this County," while Gabriel Jones, Alexander White, John Magill and Philip Pendleton Gent. became the first attorneys to practice before the bar.

The first business of the court was acting upon a will submitted for probate—and Marshall record in the Minutes:

"The last Will and Testament of Nicholas Lung dec-d was Exhibited into Court for proof but it appearing that the Testator was not in his proper sences at the time of signing the same, therefore the said Will is not admitted to Record."

Murder Described.

The old book tersely describes the circumstances of the first murder in the county, which came under jurisdiction of the court. It is recorded that on May 9, 1774, at a court held "for the Examination of Christian Wisecarver who stands committed to Common Gaol of this County, charged with Feloniously Killing a strange man on the night of the Twenty fifth day of April last, and taking from the said man a sum of money of the value of Seven Pounds ten shillings, one Bever Hatt, one Surtout Coat, one close bodied coat, one white linnin Shirt, and one chect linnin Shirt.

"Present his Majestys Justices Burr Harrison, John Tipton, Abraham Bowman, George Ruddell, and Jacob Holman Gentlemen.

"The above named Christian Wisecarver was led to the Barr and upon Examination denied the Fact with which he was charged, whereupon the Inquisition taken on the dead body, and the confession of the said Wisecarver were read, and the Rev'd. Peter Muhlenberg, Edwin Young and George Richards were sworn and Examined upon the Premises, and the Prisoner fully heard in his own defence, on consideration whereof and of the Circumstances relating to the Crime, it is the opinion of the Court that the Prisoner ought to be tried for the said supposed fact at the next Court of Oyer and Terminer to be held in the Capitol in the City of Williamsburgh on the second Tuesday in June next, and therefore he is remanded to Gaol."

The old book, of more than 300 closely written 10 by 15 inch pages and fully indexed, is considered invaluable to historians and genealogists, for it reveals information on early valley history which can not be found elsewhere.

'Unloaded Gun' Funeral Fixed

Mechanicsville Girl, 13, to Be Buried Tomorrow; Brother Absolved.

Westminster, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mildred Elizabeth Parrish, 13, of Mechanicsville, who died yesterday from a gunshot wound inflicted accidentally Friday by her brother, J. Carl Parrish, 16, will be at Mount Pleasant Methodist Episcopal Church Wednesday at 11 a. m. The Rev. Wilson T. Jarboe will conduct the services.

The accident occurred when Carl found a shotgun in a wagon and, supposing the gun to be unloaded, pulled the trigger just as his sisters, Mildred and Gretna, came in the line of fire.

Mildred received practically the full charge in the back of the head, while scattered shot wounded the younger girl. Gretna's injuries were not serious.

Acting Coroner George E. Benson and Sheriff Ray Yohn conducted an investigation which resulted in the exoneration of Carl. Mildred is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Parrish.

Shenandoah Shivers, 4 Above, But One Takes Daily River Dip

New Market, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—With temperatures as high as 60 degrees prevailing over this section of the Shenandoah Valley yesterday, residents awoke today to find the mercury had tumbled over night to 4 above zero.

One resident, however, didn't seem to mind the cold. B. T. Good was spied along the Shenandoah River near here shortly after daybreak, moving along briskly sans clothing, with a blanket thrown across his shoulders and house slippers covering his feet. At the river he broke the ice and to all outward appearances enjoyed without a shiver a dip in the frigid waters.

Six years ago, Good, 43, a carpenter and cabinet maker, found it more and more difficult, because of ill health, to go about his daily tasks. After years of treatment, Good consulted a New Market doctor last May and was told to take morning exercise and a daily dip in the river, winter and summer. Apparently, the cure has worked. Good has regained his former robust physique.

Hundreds Join Quest for Post Scholarships

Educators in Three States and District Praise School Contest.

From school supervisors and principals of public, private and parochial high schools in Washington and in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, enrollments and commendatory messages are reaching The Washington Post Scholarship Competition headquarters at The Post.

With second terms just beginning in many schools, plans are being completed in most cases for adoption into the regular curriculum of the competition's preliminary requirements, calling for the writing of essays on governmental topics.

Dr. Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction of Virginia, has expressed his appreciation of the opportunities the project offers to high school seniors in Alexandria and ten Northern Virginia counties.

"I am happy to indorse this competition," he has advised The Post. "The student-citizens inrolled in our high schools soon will be called upon to face and pass upon important problems involving social reconstruction."

250 More Enrolled.

From Prof. Fletcher Kemp, superintendent of Arlington County schools, and S. P. Vanderslice, principal of the Washington-Lee High School, at Ballston, come both praise for the project and the enrollment of 250 students in the race toward the coveted four-year tuition scholarships offered five final winners by American, Georgetown and Howard Universities and the Catholic University of America.

Mr. Vanderslice has advised that O. L. Driver, director of history and civic studies at Washington-Lee, is incorporating the writing of the essays into the curricula of both his own classes and those in American history of Lloyd McCord.

G. E. Smith, principal of Lee-Jackson High School in Fairfax County, advises his entire senior civics class of 40 students will compete under Miss Roberdeau Allison, their teacher.

Leesburg Students at Work.

O. L. Emerick, Loudoun County superintendent, writes: "I am much pleased that our high school students are eligible to compete for these scholarships. This competition presents splendid opportunities to deserving high school graduates."

At the Leesburg High School today, following formation of second semester senior English classes, students in these classes will prepare to give special consideration to the governmental subjects listed for the competition's essays and to participate within the next two months in the essay writing, according to Charles S. Monroe, principal. Miss Elizabeth Potterfield, senior English teacher, will supervise the competition at Leesburg.

Henry T. Moncure, superintendent of the Alexandria High School, and C. H. Strader, principal of George Mason High School at Alexandria, as well as C. T. Williams, superintendent of Alexandria schools, have expressed high approval.

Under supervision of his English department, Mr. Strader has enrolled all George Mason senior students in American history and civics in the contest.

From Fauquier County has come an enrollment through John A. Guy, principal of the Bealeton High School, and the Herndon High School, in Loudoun County, has enrolled through J. H. Rice, its principal.

West Virginians Start Study.

Charles Town, W. Va., eligible students are already at work according to an enrollment received from D. P. Hurley, principal of the high school.

Maryland's enrollments include the Montgomery County High School at Rockville, under supervision of L. Fletcher Schott, principal; the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, under Thomas W. Pyle principal, and the Takoma-Silver Spring High School, under E. M. Douglass, principal. Edwin W. Broowe, Montgomery County school superintendent, states: "Your plan has unusual worth, while so much is in process of remaking in our social order."

Miss Helen Neely will direct the project's progress at Bethesda-Chevy Chase in her classes. At Takoma-Silver Spring Mrs. Hilda Nutter will incorporate the work in her history classes.

In southern Maryland, at St. Marys City, Miss Adele France is starting the eligible girls in her St. Mary's Seminary in the race toward the scholarship offered a girl by American University. Miss Ruth E. Byrd will direct the contest there.

District of Columbia private school students are following the lead set by 1,000 local public high school seniors. The Rev. P. J. Clarke, S. J., principal at Gonzaga High School, has enrolled all senior English students in the essay writing. At St. Paul's Academy, Sister M. Rose Elizabeth, principal, is assigning certain of the topics to all of her upper class students in both English and history.

School Finals in March.

At the Taneytown (Md.) High School, John F. Wooden, jr., principal, will give full class credits to all members of his history classes for the writing of certain essays.

School finals are being scheduled in most cases for the latter part of March. The winning essay at each school, which will merit a handsome certificate of award, must be received by the competition headquarters by April 9, 1934. Division winners, to be chosen by April 15, will compete for the four-year tuition scholarships between May 1 and 15 at the cooperating universities.

Principals are invited to address enrollments or inquiries to Louise Proctor Engle, director of The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, at The Post, Washington, D. C.

The project is open to any bona-fide student, under 19 years old on February 1, 1934, enrolled in the second semester of a senior class in any public, private or parochial high school within the competition area, which includes: The District of Columbia; in Maryland—Anne Arundel, Calvert, Carroll, Charles, Frederick, Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys and Washington Counties; in Virginia—Alexandria City and Albemarle, Arlington, Clarke, Fairfax, Fauquier, Frederick, Loudoun, Prince William, Shenandoah and Rockingham Counties; in West Virginia—Berkeley and Jefferson Counties.

Gambling Raid Case Hales 30 Before Court

Witnesses Face Penalty of Bond Forfeiture for Absence.

More than 30 Government witnesses parade before Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Police Court yesterday, as four defendants, arrested Saturday when police raided an alleged gambling establishment at 1510 H street northwest, were arraigned for hearing.

The case was postponed until February 7. The defendants, charged with setting up a gaming table, were Leon Cohan, Thomas McClaine, John McAboy and William Cunningham. They were arrested when vice squad police raided fourth floor quarters of the building, described as one of the most elaborate gaming establishments closed in recent years.

Patrons of the reputed gambling house were held under bonds of $100 each as United States witnesses. Their appearance in court was demanded by Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart.

The procedure of forcing witnesses to appear before the bench has not been practiced for some time, it was explained. Hart declared that in future cases he would demand appearance of witnesses or forfeiture of their bonds.

Three other men, arrested in an earlier raid Saturday, pleaded not guilty and demanded jury trials. The case was continued until February 6. The men, Myer Schuman, Frank Schuman and Walter Clark, faced charges of permitting gaming. Vice squad members said they were operating an alleged "numbers" game at 3304 M street northwest.

They Satisfy—

You know, that means something

By "balancing" 6 different types of home-grown tobaccos—
By adding just the right amount of the right kinds of Turkish—
By blending and cross-blending—"welding" these tobaccos together—
We believe we have in Chesterfield a cigarette that's milder and tastes better.
"They Satisfy" has always seemed to us the best way of describing what we mean by this milder better taste.

The President's Birthday.

Today, all over the United States, people will be, figuratively, at least, singing "Happy Birthday to You!" to the gentleman who occupies the White House.

It will be a festive day. More than 5,000 balls, including three or four in Washington, will give people an opportunity to unlimber joints and muscles that have not been used for years. At Warm Springs, the "polios," as the infantile paralysis victims are called, will do a square dance in wheel chairs. Numberless midnight theater performances are scheduled; clubs of one sort or another are holding luncheons and dinners in honor of the occasion, and at least two States have declared it a legal holiday.

No man could fail to be immensely pleased by such a demonstration of interest in his birthday, but undoubtedly Mr. Roosevelt is even more gratified that the interest is taking such a substantial form. The balls, the theater parties, the luncheons, dinners and other functions are being used, by suggestion originating entirely outside the White House, to raise a handsome endowment fund for the admirable humanitarian enterprise at Warm Springs. The money will go to a fund to be used for treating "polios" who are unable to pay their way.

The country's spontaneous response is a genuine tribute to both the President and the excellent work of the Warm Springs Foundation, which he heads.

Gold Shipments.

In his last message to Congress, President Roosevelt observed, as an important aside, that "the transfer of gold in bulk is essential only for the payment of international trade balances."

Evidently the President desires to see the amount of international settlements effected by gold transfers reduced to the lowest possible figure by a closer relationship between the income and outgo of trading nations. In the past two weeks there have been other occasions on which the thesis has been stressed in Washington.

This is sound doctrine, indicating realization that a country must be willing to limit its sales abroad to amounts equivalent to what it takes from abroad in the form of goods and services. In the last analysis, in international trade, the extent of our sales to foreigners is limited by the extent of our purchases from them.

If the gold standard were functioning properly today, however, there would be little need to worry about the undesirability of massive shifts of gold from country to country. Before the war gold movements were relatively limited in amount and resulted in almost automatic readjustment of trade relationships. The simplicity and ease of the pre-war system have almost been forgotten in the chaos created by the war, the international debt problem, and now the managed currency systems. Restoration of the international gold standard would do much to achieve automatically the cessation of bulk shipments of gold which the President desires.

Export Credits.

The ambitious project to reduce the surplus of American cotton by lending China money to buy a part of it has seemingly come to naught. The RFC authorized a loan of $40,000,000 to the Chinese government for the purchase of cotton in this country and $10,000,000 for the purchase of wheat. A considerable volume of wheat is moving to that country, because Uncle Sam is exporting this staple from the Northwest at a loss of 21 cents per bushel. RFC officials expect the entire wheat fund to be utilized, but the purchase of cotton for which no export subsidy is provided has struck a snag.

Less than $2,000,000 of the credit for cotton purchases has been used. Dispatches from Shanghai indicate that the demand for American cotton in China has almost disappeared. Consequently, the RFC has announced that the loan authorization will be substantially reduced.

At first the Chinese were enthusiastic about the loan. It was decided at Nanking that money obtained from the sale of American cotton should be used to develop and modernize China's own cotton industry and to rehabilitate the rural districts. But the RFC made a reservation that cotton bought in the United States under this arrangement could not be resold outside of China. When the first shipments reached the Orient there was a flurry over rumors that China was selling American cotton to the Japanese in competition with our own exports to Nippon. The problem was turned over to the National Economic Council headed by Finance Minister Soong, and cotton purchases with RFC credit were discontinued.

Chinese mills are said to prefer native cotton which undersells the American product about 20 per cent. It was tentatively suggested that the government reduce the price of American cotton, but this met with vigorous protests on the ground that it would ruin China's own farmers. Nanking has decided, therefore, that unless the cotton loan can be converted into cash it is not a good bargain.

The implications arising from this experience are too pointed to need comment. It stands as a timely warning of difficulties confronting any policy of trying to force exports abroad through the use of Federal credit.

Stock Exchange Regulation.

The interdepartmental report on Stock Exchange Regulation is an admirable example of unbiased and informed presentation of facts and recommendations relating to a subject usually enveloped in clouds of controversy. The committee has dealt frankly with certain abuses that have given rise to demands for more stringent regulation of stock exchanges, but it has not made the mistake of minimizing the advantages that result from the flexibility of the present system of unincorporated exchanges whose members make their own rules and regulations.

It does not propose to destroy that flexibility by the imposition of hampering statutory restrictions, because it believes that "the most practical solution from a long-range viewpoint * * * is to enact a measure which will provide a system embodying the minimum of specific regulatory provisions in the statute itself and the maximum of discretionary powers of regulation in an administrative agency." That agency, to be known as the Federal Stock Exchange Authority, would supervise the exchanges under a system of compulsory Federal licensing. Only in unusual cases, where necessary to give effect to its decisions, however, would the Federal Authority undertake to license individual brokers.

One of the outstanding features of the report is the lack of dogmatic assertion and the keen appreciation of the complexity of technical difficulties connected with effective regulation. Stock exchanges, it states, "raise essentially new problems in Federal regulation. They do not present a static situation susceptible to fixed standards." The commissioners entrusted with the duty of regulation must be men of "unusual qualifications who must hold the respect of the country," the report continues, and it is believed desirable that "a representative of the stock exchanges should be drawn into the administrative agency" since the field covered is "decidedly technical and the technical view is a necessary contribution on this phase of regulation."

Elimination of speculative fluctuations in security values not justified by the conditions of the enterprises affected or by general economic conditions, and the acquisition of information which will afford a better basis for determining whether as elaborate a machine as now exists really is necessary to secure liquidity of security values are listed among the major objectives of regulation, along with the obvious undertaking to make the practices followed "reliable and clean."

Few critics would object to a moderate program of this scope, provided they felt assured that the Federal Authority acting in a supervisory capacity could enlist the services of men of the requisite experience and the high qualifications necessary to successful functioning. Doubts on this score do not, in any case, constitute an adequate defense against the kind of moderate and reasonable regulation recommended.

Debts and Deflation.

According to estimates of the Census Bureau, the net public debt of Federal, State and local governments rose from $4,850,000,000 in 1912 to $36,822,000,000 in 1932—an increase of about 659 per cent. When the census compilations were made the Federal debt amounted to only $19,225,000,000. If an anticipated addition of $12,000,000,000 to this total is realized by the end of the fiscal year 1935, the public debt then will show an increase of more than 900 per cent over 1912. But Federal, State and local governments debts constitute only a fraction of the total volume of obligations now in existence. According to a recent estimate of the Twentieth Century Fund, the private debt of this country, both long and short term, amounted to about $246,000,000,000, or more than $2,000 for each man, woman and child at the beginning of 1933.

The average man is inclined to underestimate the seriousness of a large and rapidly mounting volume of debt so long as prices are rising, business is good, and the majority of debtors are in a position to discharge their obligations. However, heavy borrowing, whether for nonproductive governmental account or for private productive use, creates a mass of fixed charges that are extraordinarily difficult to carry during periods of depression. The governmental borrower, of course, is faced by a condition in which revenues shrink while debt charges remain fixed and emergency outlays increase. The private debtor, whose borrowed funds have been carefully invested, is in a better position, but he, too, is hampered in his efforts to make a declining income cover his current outgo, especially when a large percentage of his expenditures represent fixed debt charges. Consequently, resistance to downward price readjustments is intensified greatly by the efforts of all classes of debtors—individuals, industrial concerns, and governments—to remain solvent.

Unfortunately, the pressure to cut commodity prices is enhanced, despite debtor resistance to lower prices, by debtors' endeavors to add to their income by increasing the volume of sales. Furthermore, the pressure to cut wages and to beat down prices of industrial raw materials in periods of depression is accentuated by the existence of a load of private indebtedness. The result is an increasing rigidity of the price structure which first resists and then disintegrates under the pressure of an abnormal deflationary impact.

Not only in the United States but in other parts of the world and in the international field, heavy debt burdens have constituted an increasingly great obstacle to necessary price readjustments. They have in fact played an important part in helping to produce that general instability of the exchanges which now prevails.

Harvard's Contribution.

His first annual report provided Dr. James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard, an opportunity to enunciate his ambition for the Cambridge institution to "become a truly national university," with even greater emphasis upon scholarship and better opportunities for young men of special talents, but limited means.

Dr. Conant is anxious to make academic life in Cambridge "more attractive to ambitious, brilliant young scholars" recruited, or to be recruited, for the faculty. In the field of graduate instruction, he considers the establishment of the Society of Fellows as "one of the most significant events in the recent history of Harvard." Under an endowment, the governing board of the society may select 24 junior prize fellows, not over 25 years old, "for their promise of notable contribution to knowledge and thought." They would devote their entire time to "productive scholarship" and be free from academic regulations. They would not be candidates for degrees. The junior fellows would be given $1,250 annually for three-year terms, renewable for three years more at $1,500 annually, plus free rooms and meals at one of the houses. The purpose, as the outline makes plain, is to give promising young men a field clear of ordinary academic regulations and rewards, in which to develop their own genius.

In the undergraduate field, Dr. Conant proposes an "experiment" designed to give the promising young man an opportunity to find his way to the top. He would establish, for instance, in the Middle West, half a dozen $1,000 scholarships for entering freshmen, to be selected not only because of scholastic standing but from a combination of school records, recommendations, special examinations and personal interviews by competent judges. At the end of the first year, scholarships might be given for three years and at the end of the sophomore year, for two years more, to take the emphasis off of grades and provide worthy students freedom from the worry of future financing. "We should be able to say that any man with remarkable talents may obtain his education at Harvard whether he be rich or penniless," Dr. Conant holds.

The proposals are not revolutionary, of course. Dr. Simon Flexner in his book two or three years ago advanced suggestions that are more radical—he would do away with conventional education in undergraduate fields and direct it into professional channels. But it is significant that the emphasis should be placed more and more on selective scholarship and less and less on mass education. Privately endowed institutions naturally will have to carry the burden of this higher learning, because State-supported institutions, existing as they do on tax funds, must emphasize the spread of opportunity.

Bootleg Competition.

Price lists for distilled spirits revealed by the Federal Alcohol Control Administration show a wide gap between the prices obtained by the manufacturers and those paid by the public. Whisky prices quoted by distillers have been reduced somewhat during the last month, and retail prices—which had been boosted unusually high by the frantic demand for legal liquor immediately after repeal—have tapered off. But the margin between the two sets of prices still appears to be abnormal.

For certain brands of whisky, liquor stores in nearby Maryland are charging twice as much as the distillers' prices, including taxes, according to the findings of the FACA. It is reported that medicinal whisky can be purchased at drug stores in Washington for slightly more than the price of comparable spirits under Montgomery County's dispensary system. Illicit liquor can be bought in the District for less than the cost of legal spirits just across the Maryland border.

The most serious aspect of this situation is the encouragement it gives to the bootlegger. So long as illicit liquor can compete with legal spirits bootlegging may be expected to flourish. Under the prohibition regime the illegal manufacture of liquor became an extensive industry. It is generally agreed that it will be wiped out only through the dispensing of liquor at prices which the bootlegger can not meet.

Price adjustments are already under way. Where competition is permitted a reasonable margin between distillers and retail prices may be worked out. Where prices are automatically controlled by agencies of the State or local governments it is important that the menace of bootleg competition be recognized, at least until the illicit liquor business has been crushed.

St. Lawrence Waterway.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An item in our local papers intimates that Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, has warned the Senate of the United States that Great Britain wants the St. Lawrence waterway constructed to "provide a military avenue through the United States."

Surely the honorable senator could not have been serious in making such a statement? In the event of war (which is inconceivable) the route would be practically useless to Great Britain. If he gave this point careful consideration he should realize that it would have no strategic value as it would be practically impossible for an invading fleet to even reach Lake Ontario. With modern artillery your Army could smash the canal to smithereens with a few shots to say nothing of what would happen to the fleet attempting the passage. On the other hand does he for one moment believe that Great Britain would attempt such a hazardous undertaking? If a conflict arose such an attack would be made by air under modern methods.

Does the honorable senator realize that the United States and Canada have existed peacefully side by side for more than 100 years without fortifications anywhere on our respective borders? Are we not of the same blood and able to settle any small differences by diplomacy? Let him banish the thought of war.

From a beneficial standpoint it should be apparent that the St. Lawrence waterway would be of greater advantage to the United States than to Great Britain or Canada. It would open tremendous transportation facilities for your great cities such as Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago and many other points bordering on the waters of the Great Lakes. Competition by Canada would be infinitesimal for generations to come as she has but a few small towns on the Great Lakes that could prejudice the trading possibilities of your country.

Perhaps Senator Lewis will review his opinion and study the economical advantages to be gained by favoring construction of the waterway and expel the fear that Great Britain wants it constructed for war purposes.

"BRITISHER."

The Boomerang.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Whatever the sentiment may be in the national capital here in the Far West the conviction is growing that Mr. Roosevelt's so-called economy program may turn out to be a godsend for the Republican party in the way of supplying a clean-cut issue on which to fight in the next congressional election. Since the present Congress seems to have chosen to refuse relief to those suffering from the 15 per cent plus cut that large body of voters are not likely to flock to the support of congressmen who helped Mr. Roosevelt in this obvious discrimination against them and their families.

And should this Congress also stand by the President in his anti-veteran policy, every veteran organization in the Nation will accept the challenge and make it a deciding issue at the polls. In such a time as this, and when the Government is loudly and continuously calling for additional employment, better wages, more spending of money, how can the "Yes" congressmen defend that Government's own actions whereby it has deprived employes of work, slashed the none-too-generous pay of those kept on its sacred roll, and by methods as unintelligent as inhuman has deprived thousands of disabled veterans of even a bare subsistence?

Mr. Roosevelt and his subordinates were offered a rare opportunity to show their wisdom and humanity when given power to revise and prune the pension list. But unfortunately their methods and results have shown little of either. Yes, Mr. Roosevelt's marvelous economy is a veritable ammunition magazine for his opponents, while he talks of a golden future they can point to the victims of the present.

The Proposed Naval Hospital.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reference was made in your paper of January 23 to the hearing before the Naval Affairs Committee in which the question of a new Naval Hospital arose. Admiral Parsons, former chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, who appeared, is one of a succession of unusually able officers holding that position, but few have had the broad outlook and concern not only for the building program of the Navy, but for its relationship to the National Capital. As acting chief, he fought strenuously to prevent the erection of a new Navy building in the Southwest section—far removed from its executive relationship and its commander in chief.

In accordance with his duty he had plans prepared for a new Naval Hospital and recognizing local talent placed the design in the hands of the allied architects, and now he has the courage to question erecting this proposed structure on the present Naval Hospital grounds. It is true the Public Buildings Commission approved the Navy's use of this land for a new hospital and that the Commission of Fine Arts passed favorably upon the design for the building.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, however, has always strenuously opposed the use of this area either for the Public Health Service or for a hospital. Apart from the malappropriateness of the site for such uses there is no chance in this restricted area for normal or indeed emergency expansion. A medical center similar to Walter Reed is the only logical solution.

There is no more beautiful site in this city nor one with a more inspiring outlook. We should not be bound by the errors in judgment of our forebears and be today compelled to turn over a supurb location, dominating the most beautiful architectural group of our times, to the purposes of a hospital and vivisection laboratory.

The Public Health Service and the Naval Hospital may be a vital necessity, but they are scarcely appropriate as a background to the Lincoln Memorial. CITIZEN.

Over-Population.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All this talk about over-production, the surplus of crops and commodities, yet never a word about over-population, the surplus of human beings! But for an excess of people seeking a livelihood there would not have been these industrial excesses, this over-crowding of occupations. Our economic system has not broken down so much as it has been swamped, deluged, inundated by oncoming hordes of humanity (to which immigration superadded). Not technological unemployment has undone it but the teeming millions. In no small measure has this situation been induced by propaganda in certain quarters for large families, especially among the poor and illiterate; ill-advised talk of race suicide; ill-judged opposition to birth control. Now obviously no system (short of socialism or communism) can stand up under an unlimited influx of participants in uncontrolled numbers. Beyond the civic saturation point, growth of population does not add to wealth but diminishes it. Effective demand does not keep pace with augmented supply. It may be that the Malthusian doctrine needs restatement; yet, if population does not increase faster than subsistence, it nevertheless does increase faster than society's capacity to absorb it.

Jewish Persecution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note that Rabbi Stephen S. Wise in an address recently at the Jewish Community Center publicly scourged one government that has and still persecutes his people and at the same time entirely ignored another even more guilty government.

Hitlerism may have been responsible for some few Jewish deaths and much misery, but it can not be denied that the Russian brand of communism in a short decade and a half had slaughtered its Jews by the tens of thousands, impoverished those who managed to survive, and all but blotted out the Jewish faith from Sovietdom.

It is time Rabbi Wise took counsel with his more sane and logical self and decided upon a consistent course of conduct that does not discriminate between one enemy state and another. He might find more general support for his war on Hitlerism by enlightened Jews if he so managed it that such support does not result in giving aid and comfort to a far more serious menace to the world's safety and well-being.

Don't Quit Fighting to Gather Loot While the Enemy Is at the Gates

By Robert Quillen.

The ordinary citizen is a selfish individualist before he is a patriot.

He may give his life for his country in the excitement of war, but he is reluctant to give up cash in time of peace.

If agrees to do something for the common good in time of emergency, he may keep the letter of his agreement, but he will harness the emergency for his personal good if he can.

He did his part in cheering the brave soldier boy, as you doubtless remember, and then charged his country four prices for everything the brave soldier boy used.

Observe the working of the plan to reduce cotton production.

When the planter was asked to plow up part of his crop, he quite naturally chose for destruction the poorest cotton on his poorest land.

This duty finished, he did his utmost, where the season permitted, to increase production on his remaining acreage.

As a result of this shrewdness, he and his fellow planters produced 100,000 bales more than the previous year's normal crop.

This year, having agreed to cut his acreage at planting time, he will select his best land for cultivation, fertilize it heavily, and try to make two bolls grow where one grew before.

He won't violate his agreement, but he will do his utmost to make it worthless. And other producers will work the same scheme if they can.

Big business set the example. It accepted the NRA plan to hasten recovery and then used it as an excuse to raise prices out of all proportion to increased costs.

Where is the sense in that kind of thing?

If patriots had formed an army to save their country from an invader, what would you think of them if they should break ranks to sift gold from the sands of a river? What would a few nuggets be worth to them if they lost their homes and their country?

An immediate profit will prove a loss if it is gained by delaying recovery.

Taking it is like eating the minnows that were meant for bait to catch larger fish.

Mr. Roosevelt is the captain of a crippled ship, trying to save all on board. If any man on the ship is tempted to quit the pumps and pack up his treasures, let him reflect that treasure will do him small good if the ship goes down.

The Philippine Question.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a native of the Philippine Islands, count me as one of those who opposed the Hawes-Cutting-Hare bill. This bill is a barrier and detrimental to the future generation of the Filipino people in their pursuit of happiness and enlightenment. It is an insult to our National pride. It is a fake independence gesture that would seriously imperil the economic, social and political institutions of our country; it is contrary to every fundamental principle of a democratic form of government; it is an act for special interests of the American capitalists in dominating the world by economic imperialism. An absolute and complete independence without any protection from the United States but under international agreement is preferable more than anything else.

We can not tolerate to be under foreign domination. We must prove to them that there is a place for us under the sun. Let us show that we really want freedom. Yours for absolute and complete independence at any cost.

RIZAL G. FLORES.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent speech in the House of Representatives, appealing to Congress to prolong the life of the Hawes-Cutting bill another nine months, Commissioner Osias stated in effect that if the Filipinos had been given a chance to express their opinion on the law they would have accepted it.

Would the commissioner please tell me and his colleagues in the House why he has reversed himself on the question of whether or not the Philippine Legislature represents the Filipinos? How can he represent the Filipino people when the Philippine Legislature, which selected him resident commissioner, does not?

Mr. Osias was a member of the Congress which wrote into the Hawes-Cutting act the provision submitting the measure to the Philippine Legislature for acceptance or rejection. To be sure, his membership in Congress does not carry the right of a vote in Congress, but the fact remains that he had the opportunity to voice his views on the matter and the bill was approved by him as well as by the Philippine mission with which he was then working.

It is not a good story to tell Congress that the legislature does not represent the people of the Philippines, because congressmen have the habit of thinking that a law-making body does represent the people. Furthermore, there are members of Congress who still will recall that Mr. Osias has been in the habit of referring to the legislature as "the duly constituted representatives of the Philippine people." TEDDY DE NOLASCO.

Present Monetary System.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading paragraphs, columns and volumes about our monetary system, presenting a great variety of grotesque suggestions for a new and a better one, prepared by all sorts and conditions of people, am filled with mystified amazement by the absence of a single line in commendation or support for the one we already have.

Whenever we can fully comprehend that our present system is neither obsolete nor defective but is rather a smooth running machine of marvelous efficiency; that full responsibility for our misfortunes rests squarely on us who have made use of it rather than on the system itself; and that a greedy internecine struggle for wealth and power such as has been taking place since the beginning of the World War will always bring disaster under any system; then, and not until then, will our country and the world be in a suitable mental attitude to grapple with the problem in a practical manner and give us a start along the rough and rocky road which leads to prosperity.

It is lamentably true that past indiscretions have brought us to the point where a heart-breaking reduction of our dollar must be made, purely as an act of National bankruptcy. All this is water that has gone over the dam. Why waste our time in moaning about it?

What can be the objection to facing this fact and perserving to posterity, at least in theory, the sanctity of public and private contract which has been a fundamental principal of all good governments for ages?. GUY H. CLARK.

The Holy War.

Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" overshadowed all his other works. But there are three, besides his masterpiece, that are great literature, and are still highly interesting to intelligent readers; and one of them, I think, may still be very attractive to boys and girls. "Grace Abounding," his spiritual autobiography, is the history of a soul in torment and its release. "The Life and Death of Mr. Badman," had it not been intended as a religious tract, might be regarded as the first regular English novel. It gives an extraordinarily clear and vivid picture of English village and rural life toward the latter part of the seventeenth century. Furthermore, Bunyan showed great restraint in describing the death of Mr. Badman. In a time when the horrors of the sinner's deathbed were made as edifyingly sensational as possible, Bunyan allowed Mr. Badman to die painlessly and peacefully, thereby really emphasizing the unspeakable tortures that awaited him in Hell.

The "Holy War" published in 1682, was the delight of my childhood; I must have read it six or seven times. It is probably the most perfect allegory in the English language. The town of Mansoul has five gates—Eargate, Eyegate, Nosegate, Mouthgate and Feelgate. The ruler is my Lord Will Be Will. The town is besieged and taken by Diabolus, with his army drafted in Hell. Later the siege is raised by a victorious army led by Prince Emanuel, with Capt. Credence as chief officer; they fight with Capt. Pasthope, Capt. Sepulchre, and other unpleasant soldiers.

Slang.

Shortly after New Year's Mr. Wilfred J. Funk ventured to list the ten modern Americans who have contributed most to the language in the coin of new words—our slang makers, in short. Mr. Funk is fond of lists. Last year he named the ten most beautiful words in English, which, as I remember, did not include that astonishing choice of a Chinese gentleman who, on the same grounds, selected "cellar-door." Being a poet, Mr. Funk has found the study of words a natural hobby. He happens also to be a partner of Funk & Wagnalls, publishers of the Literary Digest and untold dictionaries.

But when Mr. Funk listed the slang makers, he drew fire. Those he named were the late Sime Silverman, editor of Variety; H. L. Mencken, Damon Runyon, "Bugs" Baer, Walter Winchell, Gelett Burgess, George Ade, Gene Buck, author of many lyrics in the Follies; the late T. A. D. Dorgan, cartoonist, and the late Ring Lardner. No sooner had he made public his nominees than some columnist, to whom I should like to give credit for this wholly appropriate observation, pointed out that fecund as these gentlemen had been in inventing words and phrases it was yet true that very little of their coinage had actually got into colloquial speech.

I must leave that rebuttal to take care of itself, which it is well able to do. But the remark shows the proper humility, for the fact is that only a sliver of common slang can be traced to its inventor. Slang is our sole folk-poetry, anonymous as air.

• • • •

"Slang: Today and Yesterday" (MacMillan, $5), is a prime example of something the English do better than anyone else—keeping a philological study or dictionary sound and scholarly and at the same time making it into a piece of wholly delightful reading. Its author, Mr. Eric Partridge, stands in the company of the Fowler brothers ("The King's English," "Modern English Usage"), of Ernest Weekley "Etymological Dictionary of Modern English"), and of counties others from Dr. Johnson on. We have Mr. Mencken and his "American Language," but the rest, to paraphrase Queen Victoria, are "not amusing."

While I attempt to give a synopsis of "Slang: Today and Yesterday," you must keep in mind that the book is not the slightest bit dry. Mr. Partridge writes with flair and sharp sauce, with a continual good-humor which, if English, is by no means lost. To borrow from his stock-in-trade, the book would "make a stuffed bird laugh."

He begins with the generalities of slang—what, whence, and why. It takes a deal of quoting authorities, and comes down at last to granting that "slang, inherent in human nature, is indicative not only of man's earthiness but of his indomitable spirit." Then Mr. Partridge warms up, evidently happy to get the theories over with. He takes English slang century by century, and quotes with gusto the writers who have best caught the flavor of their times. He devotes little sections to 25 special kinds of English slang—cockney, public house, society, turf, &c. He glances at the amazing slang of Australia and New Zealand and other colonies. Then he goes into American slang in a long section, quoting writers from Washington Irving to H. C. Witwer, Walter Winchell and Robert Benchley. He ends with three vocabularies, English, Australian, and American, which will tell you, for example, the what and when of "hanky-panky," "budgeree," and "mooch the stem." And several thousand others as well.

Leafing through the book, you come upon the chronological sequence of English slang words for a man of fashion: "trig, blood, macaroni, buck, incroyable, dandy, dude, swell, toff." "Cracked," "grit" and "devilish tricky" go back, though you would scarcely believe it, to Aristophanes in the fifth century B. C. Many ultra-literary words in our time were slang in the original language—"excoriate" means simply "to take the hide off." We think "hick" a pure and fairly recent Americanism—it was mentioned by the Englishman Grose in 1785. "Racket," in exactly our sense, was English slang in 1861. The late Rev. W. A. Spooner did not invent Spoonerisms ("kinkering congs" for "conquering kings,"—"chutton mop" was noticed by Hotten in 1859, a few years after Spooner was born. And as to "bender," a drinking spree, I would have laid my last cent that it grew up since the war. But no—it was already current in 1854. One must be humble in these matters. Shakespeare, I once learned elsewhere, said "whoopee."

"Slang: Today and Yesterday" is a rousing trip through the land of folk-language. I very much doubt if another guide will come along in the next 50 years to equal the sharp-eyed and smiling Mr. Partridge. No one now can lead you better into that country which, as G. K. says, is "a kind of topsy-turveydom of poetry, full of blue moons and white elephants, of men losing their heads and men whose tongues run away with them—a whole chaos of fairy-tales."

And to say that, you will notice, Mr. Chesterton wrote in slang.

The National Gallery

HUGH S. JOHNSON, Administrator, NRA. The Blue Eagle was his own idea. In his 51 years he has been soldier, lawyer, manufacturer, author, poet. Graduating at West Point in 1903, he went up the military scale to brigadier general in 1918, won the D.S.M. for "work on selective draft." He originated it in 1917, drew up the rules and regulations. Risked his official neck by ordering draft cards, &c., before Congress voted the money.

Wrote "Williams of West Point" in 1907, "Williams on Service," 1909. Quit the Army in 1919 to run the Moline Plow Co., became a right-hand man for B. M. Baruch in 1927.

Dynamic, explosive, he works under gruelling high pressure. More colorful than Al Smith in vocabulary, he is the most striking figure on the American scene since the once Happy Warrior. Even sedate New York newspapers printed an "unprintable" story he exploded amid his oratorical fireworks in a recent speech.

A newspaper man one day asked him when he was going to "crack down" on Henry Ford. He answered that he thought the public would crack down first, and the label Crack-down Johnson was born.

Murder Jury Picked to Try Woman Doctor

Defendant Is Undisturbed as "Highball Slaying" Case Opens.

Greenwood, Miss., Jan. 29 (AP). Smartly gowned and completely at ease, 33-year-old Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, specialist in children's diseases, today sat unmoved as one prospective juror after another assured the State they would not hesitate to send her to the gallows if she should be proved guilty of murder.

In a crowded courtroom she went on trial in the death of her friend and professional associate, Dr. John Preston Kennedy.

During the tedium of preliminary jury selection, Dr. Dean, handsome, aloof, listened attentively, an aunt on one side and a nurse, long her personal friend, on the other at the defense counsel table. Smiling occasionally at sallies between the presiding judge and veniremen, she had never a glance for the jammed court behind her, where sat a host of her friends and acquaintances and scores of the frankly curious.

The State will attempt to prove that Dr. Kennedy, prominent Greenwood surgeon, died last August after drinking a poisoned whisky highball handed him by Dr. Dean during a midnight visit to the woman physician's apartment.

After his death, friends disclosed that Dr. Kennedy had made plans to rewed his divorced wife, who had gone to Panama to await his arrival. Mrs. Kennedy is in Greenwood for Dr. Dean's trial, but attorneys have declined to say whether she would be called as a witness.

District Attorney Arthur Jordan has indicated he will not ask specifically for the death penalty, but will leave the punishment, in event of conviction, to the jury itself.

Miss Brancato To Sing 'Gilda' In Opera Here

Greeted as Prima Donna After Recent Debut in Chicago.

Rosemarie Brancato, the young coloratura soprano who made her debut ten days ago in Chicago as Gilda in "Rigoletto," has been engaged by Fortune Gallo to sing the same role here tomorrow afternoon with the San Bario Opera Company, at the National Theater. "Martha," scheduled for the matinee performance, has been removed to give local music-lovers an opportunity to hear the new prima donna.

Miss Brancato is from Kansas City, whence Marion Talley skyrocketed into fame eight years ago. Previous to her appearance in Chicago she had not sung the role of Gilda on the stage. The Chicago Tribune reviewer said: "Her voice has been well schooled. It rippled over the graceful pasages of 'Cano nome' with complete ease and assurance, ending on a high note which impelled the audience into silence and was then lost in quite the longest cutburst of applause that has greeted any single aria this season."

In the cast with Miss Brancato will be Dmitri Onofrei (Duke of Mantua), Mario Valle (Rigoletto), Harold Kravitt (Sparafucile), Charlotte Bruno (Maddalena), Natale Cervi (Monterone), Marie Zara (Countess Ciprano), and Antonio Crespo (Count Ciprano).

Tonight's opera will be "Madame Butterfly," with Hizi Koyke, Japanese soprano, in the name part. Other performances are: "Aida," Wednesday night; "Carmen," Thursday night, with Ina Bourskaya of the Metropolitan in the title role; "Lohengrin," Friday night; "Hansel and Gretel" (in English), Saturday afternoon, and "Il Trovatore," Saturday night.

Drive to Rid N. Y. of Policy Racket Opens

O'Ryan Hints Promotions in Month's Campaign on Gambling.

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—The policy racket, with its reputed revenue of many millions a year to gangsters, was ordered eradicated within 30 days by Police Commissioner John F. O'Ryan today.

Known also as "playing the numbers," the racket has flourished throughout the Metropolitan area under the alleged domination of such notorious gangsters as Dutch Schultz.

The commissioner also doomed slot machines.

Promotions Promised.

Mobilizing detectives for the drive, O'Ryan said:

"Slot machines and the policy game together constitute the greatest source of income to the racketeers in this city. From them, they derive an enormous fund available for corruption and bribery. They must be driven out.

"Take all necessary steps to break the back of the policy racket within two weeks and to substantially eliminate it within 30 days."

O'Ryan said the number of arrests made and the gathering of evidence leading to conviction of "higher-ups" would "receive marked attention from the police commissioner in making promotions."

"Arrest Schultz on Sight."

The policy racket, it is said, has found its greatest income in Harlem. In a recent raid a patrolman was arrested in a "pay-off" station raid and suspended.

Superstition and hunches figure importantly in "playing the numbers." Addresses and license numbers are only a few of the ways a player figures the combination he will play.

Schultz has long been identified by police with the policy operators. Commissioner O'Ryan several weeks ago ordered Schultz arrested on sight. He is also wanted by Federal authorities on an indictment charging him with income tax violations.

While in a house at 1122 Union court northwest, Clinton Grill, of the Everett Hotel, Eighteenth and H streets northwest, told police yesterday that he was attacked by a gang of colored men and robbed of $20.

He said the gang beat him into semiconsciousness, carried him to a second-floor room and left him lying on a bed. Later, he found his money gone. Charles Johnson, colored, 30, of the Union court address, was arrested and held for investigation.

Everything Under Control—That's The Fashion Figure For 1934

By JANE STUART.

For the past three years corsetieres have been struggling with this problem of comfortably controlled curves. Now the flowing lines indicated for Spring make it acute. Neither daytime nor evening clothes make any allowance for bulges, for girdles that ride up, or garters that show.

Bedposts and six yards of lacings are out of the picture. The modern girl wants her comfort as well as a figure. Corset makers won a large chunk of her respect when they created the sensational garments of that marvelous, two-way stretch Lastex—the magic thread that makes garments fit!

There is the boneless corsette, ribbed across the back to prevent a spare tire look, and finished at the bottom to prevent a bulging line where the garment ends. Girdles, for those who prefer them, come in 14 and 16 inch lengths. Most women, unless unusually short, require the 16 inch length, for there is nothing so ugly as a too-short corset on a tall woman.

Novel Designs Draw Record Auto Throngs

Thousands Continue Their Inspection of 1934 Machines.

Revolutionary body designs, new refinements in craftsmanship and unparalleled advancements in engineering continued to draw record crowds into Washington Auditorium for the Capital's 1934 automobile show last night.

As far as Washington motorists are concerned, the confidence that permitted auto manufacturers to adopt changes in motor car design and construction of unprecedented radicalism appeared confirmed as attendance totals mounted to new heights. To date the show has broken all existing attendance records here.

There is nothing in the design of the motor car of two or three years ago to suggest today's automobile, which resembles nothing so much as a beetle. In all makes the stream-lined trend has been carried to near extremes—low sweeping hoods and cowls and gently tapering rears make front and back almost indistinguishable.

Previous conceptions in construction seem to have been annihilated as far as spring suspension is concerned by independently swung wheels, developed in some makes to include both front and rear.

Beneath the hood the changes have been nearly as radical. All price classes have gone in heavily for power and speed, even manufacturers in the low-price ranges claiming as much as 80 horse power for their cars. Gone too, apparently, is the small car from the standpoint of wheelbase, the smallest measuring 112 inches.

An estimated 2,300 visited the show last night, the best one-night attendance figure to date and bringing the total to a record 7,300.

Seton J. Allen Sued On Food, Room Bill

Nathan Sinrod, 800 Sixteenth street northwest, filed suit yesterday in District Supreme Court against Seton J. Allen, whose address was given as being in care of Senator E. D. Smith, Senate Office Building, for $1,606.57.

The suit alleges the money is due the Hay-Adams House, Sixteenth and H streets northwest, for room rent, food and other items supplied Allen as a tenant. Originally, it was alleged, the debt was $2,790.12. It has been reduced through the payment of more than $1,100.

$111,944 Is Asked For Lynn's Office

Improvements at Capitol Would Use $110,000.

The largest estimate of $110,000 is asked to add equipment, make repairs and place a water main at the Capitol power plant, while $1,944 is asked to increase the personnel at the House Office Building.

Safe Crackers Get $111 Loot In Four Raids

Church Street Office Safe Yields Cash; 3 Others Defy Burglars.

Safe crackers early yesterday invaded four business establishments and succeeded in cracking one safe and escaped with $111.

Officials of the Rainbow Paint Co., 1445 Church street northwest, reported a rear window forced and the office ransacked. The door of a safe was torn from its hinges and the cash was gone.

The burglars met first defeat in Bailey's Tire Store, 1501 Fourteenth street northwest. There they battered an office safe with tools found in the store. The vault resisted their efforts, however.

Operations then were shifted to the insurance office of John E. Hall, jr., 1903 Seventh street northwest. His office was ransacked and the combination drilled from a safe. A strong inner door of the safe prevented robbery.

Virginia Expert Traces State's Racial Problem

"Low Marginal" Whites Declared Cause of Ills.

The speaker said marginal whites account for Virginia's low standing in many fields of endeavor.

Asserting there are more than 350,000 socially neglected marginal whites in Virginia, Dr. Garnett said recent studies showed that from a third to one-half of Virginia's rural population can be considered marginal from the standpoint of ability, income and living conditions. He said this condition is true even in normal times, and intensified in times of economic stress.

From one-tenth to one-fifth of the population can be classed as submarginal.

He said that in 1929, 41 per cent of the farm operators had a gross income of only $600 a year, while for the past few years, it has been about half that.

Asserting that only one-third as many new jobs were available in 1930 as there were young men seeking employment, the speaker said the number of marginal whites is increasing.

He said that diminishing demand for unskilled labor, coupled with anticipated decrease in the demand for bootleg liquor, promised to make the problem of the marginal whites a critical one for Virginia.

The speaker said provisions should be made "for an eugenic sterilization operation on a volutary basis and at public expense. * * * There should be provision for the extension of birth-control information under proper safeguards."

Ready readers await the offers in Post Classified Ads, the first thing in the morning.

Roosevelts Guests At Garner's Dinner

President and First Lady Attend Only Function to Be Given by Members of Cabinet for Which They Will Accept an Invitation This Season.

Last evening the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were the guests of honor at a dinner given by Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner at the Washington Hotel.

The usual dinners given in honor of the President and the First Lady by the members of the Cabinet and their wives have been canceled at the President's request, so tonight's dinner will be the only one given by members of this group which the Roosevelts will attend this season. The luncheons honoring the First Lady given by the Ladies of the Cabinet have been substituted for the customary dinners.

The dinner was given in the sun parlor of the hotel which was artistically decorated with dark green feathery palms and ferns and clusters of Azalea. The long table had seven center pieces of Hollywood roses, pink snapdragons and white Budlea, and was lighted by tall ivory tapers. Before and during dinner music was furnished by the United States Navy Band.

After dinner, the ladies retired to the rose room, which was decorated with Australian ferns and spring flowers, for after-dinner coffee. Later, the President, the Vice President and the other gentlemen of the party joined them for the musical entertainment.

The guests were Senator and Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Representative and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Representative Bertrand Snell, Mr. Lewis W. Douglas, Bishop James E. Freeman and Mrs. Freeman, the Surgeon General of the Army and Mrs. R. U. Patterson, Mrs. Filliman Evans, Capt. Walter Vernou, naval aid to the President, and Mrs. Vernou; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse H. Jones, the Mayor of Philadelphia and Mrs. Hampton Moore, the former Governor of North Carolina and Mrs. Max Gardner, Judge and Mrs. Jeb Adams, Lieut. Col. Edwin M. Watson, military aid to the President, and Mrs. Watson; Mr. and Mrs. Will Rogers, of California; Mrs. Borden Harriman, Mr. Amon Z. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Tumulty, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Buck, of Long Island; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Murphy, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. James L. Wright.

Dr. Thorp Tells Women's Forum Of Rum Control

Manila Greets General Parker As Commander

High Honors Bestowed on Officer and Family in Philippines.

Word has at last reached Washington of the arrival in the Philippines on December 16 of Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, who up until 1929 was stationed in Washington as assistant chief of staff. High military honors were accorded the commanding general as he disembarked from the U. S. Army transport Grant, at Manila. An escort of honor was furnished from the Thirty-first Infantry and a 13-gun salute was fired from a battery on the Muelle San Francisco.

The committee to greet Gen. Parker, who was accompanied by Mrs. Parker and their daughter, Miss Ann Parker, was headed by Lieut. Col Charles F. Thompson. In the afternoon the officers and ladies of the Thirty-first, Forty-fifth and Fifty-seventh regiments gathered to welcome them informally at the Army and Navy Club.

To the surprise and delight of Manila, the new commanding general announced his intention of playing in the polo game the day after his arrival, and so for the first time since the World War a department headquarters polo four took to the field led by the commanding general of the Philippine department. Arriving on the same transport was another former Washington polo player, Lieut. Joseph Haskell, who made his home here for several years with his parents, Maj. Gen. William Haskell, New York National Guard, and Mrs. Haskell, now of New York.

Gov. General Frank Murphy entertained at Malacanan Palace on December 19 in compliment to Gen. and Mrs. Parker and Miss Ann Parker. Gen. Parker and his personal staff reviewed the Thirty-first Infantry on Monday afternoon on Burnham Green. Following the review, Gen. and Mrs. Parker and their daughter were guests of honor at a tea given by Col. and Mrs. Lorenzo Gasser in their home on the old Manila wall.

Nation's Notables Pay Tribute To President Here Tonight

Guests for Birthday Ball Assemble From Many Distant Cities.

An insistent demand for tables and tickets assures a capacity attendance at the President's Birthday Ball to be given at the Shoreham tonight. Men and women high in official, diplomatic, residential and social circles and the public generally, will be present, to do honor to President Roosevelt on his fifty-second birthday anniversary by aiding in the cause that is so near his heart, the permanent endowment for the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Many distinguished visitors from outside the city will be here by tonight to attend this, the most important of the Nation-wide program of balls arranged under the auspices of the National committee for the Birthday Ball of the President.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Curtis Dall, accompanied by Miss Marion Dickerman, of the Todhunter School, New York; Miss Nancy Cook, of the Val Kill Furniture Factory, New York, and Mrs. Frank Scheider, secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt, will arrive at the Shoreham ball shortly after 10 o'clock, and will be received by the floor committee headed by Gen. William E. Horton. At the entrance of their box, Mrs. Roosevelt and her party will be greeted by Mrs. John Allen Dougherty and Mrs. Isabella Greenway, chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the Washington committee, and by Mrs. John R. Williams, chairman of the table committee for the ball.

Outside the hotel in multicolored lights, reaching from the porte cochere to the roof of the building, will be a "Happy Birthday" greeting; and inside the hotel will be a huge birthday cake, the united gift of the bakers of the Capital City.

A Great United Gift To the President.

Floral decorations from all the florists in the city will deck the lobbies and the lounge, the ballrooms, the palm court, the dining rooms and every available space which is not reserved for dancing. Everything, everywhere has been donated by all concerned, from the hotel itself to the smallest services of each and every person and attendant, including the orchestras and the bands. It is a service of love to the great cause of humanity, in tribute to the leadership of President Roosevelt.

Stage stars and radio stars will offer entertainment, and all of them have journeyed here for that purpose alone. The ball will continue until after 2 o'clock, and dancing will be continuous in the west ballroom. Dancing in the main ballroom will be interrupted only during the symphony concert of a half hour, from 10:45 to 11:15 o'clock, and for brief periods of entertainment.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull will occupy a table at the ball and will entertain guests. Ranking diplomats will be guests at many parties and high Government officials will be present. It is doubtful that any ball ever given in the Capital City has exceeded this one in brilliance.

Guest List a Roster Of Notable Names.

Among the almost countless table parties tonight will be one at which Miss Peggy Hopkins Joyce will be honor guest, along with Senator and Mrs. Reynolds, Senator and Mrs. Bachman, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Silverman, Miss Frances Thibadeau, Mr. James Dunn, all of them the guests of Mr. Dennis J. Mahoney.

Another table will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Doherty, of New York and Palm Beach. Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, general chairman of the ball, and Mrs. John R. Williams, chairman of the committee on tables, each will entertain a group of distinguished guests.

Mrs. Rufus Graves Mather will entertain at her table the Comtess de Buyer, Mr. Richard Flournoy, of the State Department; Mr. James Forrester Davidson, Col. and Mrs. John Bigelow, and Miss Alice G. Wilkins.

Another table which will be replete with interesting persons of the Capital will be one at which will be seated Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. Hans Kindler, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. Truxton Beale, Miss Catrina Beale, Mr. Robert Woods Bliss, Dr. Hans Kindler, Mr. Walter Bruce Howe, Mr. L. Grant-Smith, Mr. George Garrett, Mr. Olin Dows, and the Minister of Rumania, Mr. Charles A. Davila. Another table will be occupied by Miss Deborah Dows, Miss Anne Eustis, Miss Beatrice Phillips, Mr. Elisha Lee, Mr. Borgenstierna, and Jonk Heer Van der Wyck.

More Members Added To Floor Committee.

The members of the floor committee, not already announced, are Capt. Camille Husson, Naval Attache of France; Commander Federico Monreal y Pilon, Naval Attache of Spain; Capt. Masashi Kobayashi, Naval Attache of Japan; Maj. Gen. George O. Squier, U. S. A.; Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry, U. S. A.; the Assistant Secretary of War, Mr. Harry H. Woodring; Mr. Brien McMahon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; Commander H. F. Kingman, U. S. N.; Commander A. S. Merrill, U. S. N.; Col. John P. Haines, U. S. A.; Capt. D. R. Nimmer, U. S. ## Dormitory Boycott Violator Is Paddled Picket lines were tightly drawn about the girl's dormitory of Yankton, S. Dak., College recently and paddles whacked merrily at a violator of a "no dates" edict, the Associated Press reports.

A student who disregarded the boycott, decreed in protest at faculty reduction of the time allotment for masculine visits to the girls' home, was sentenced to a trip through the "paddle line." The penalty was inflicted with gusto shortly before he was scheduled to sit through a long semester examination.

Costume 'Gems' Provide Glitter All Over Town

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Seldom has a season started with so much glamour and glitter as this one. On all sides, in the shop windows, on the counters, at teas, dances and dinners we are met with the sparkle of costume jewelry. Dresses which would ordinarily boast only their simplicity are now all alight with the shimmer of rhinestones. Pins, buckles, clips, earrings, bracelets, necklaces, even belts, lend their bit of brightness to further style.

Attractive costume jewelry is not hard to find. What one shop hasn't another has, but costume jewelry at attractive prices is not within such easy reach. However, a downtown shop which specializes in just this, which buys every week or so the very newest products, and which carries a complete line of every kind of costume jewelry is one place where the price and pocketbook are perfectly compatible.

The minute one enters the door, the scintillating rhinestones in the cases and on the shelves twinkle temptingly. An earring tree has all the shine and shimmer of so many icicles. There's every variety, long, short, plain and fancy, some designed for tall women, some for short. There are those which are perfectly adapted to a close coiffure, or those more suited to loose curls. Just as there are necklaces designed for plump necks and necklaces for thin.

If those of us who as often as not wear the wrong kind of jewelry would take time to try on some of the many types here, we'd probably find the right thing.

If we fell heir to a butter dish like the one on display in a local shop, we'd consider ourselves lucky. If we were able to buy it we'd feel pretty lucky. And if we do buy it we're really lucky.

It has that certain antique air as though it realized its four slender legs were typically Queen Anne. When the lovely oval silver top is folded down a perfectly plain flat bottom meets the eye. This may be removed to disclose an inner compartment for crushed ice (ideal to keep ice firm on hot days).

Besides being a butter dish, it can serve as a sauce tureen, or a little bowl, which will hold just the amount of vegetables for two.

Gardens should not be regarded as only spring and summer havens. There are numerous things besides plants which suit it any time of year and make it as interesting in January as July. Among these is a weather vane.

An M street shop which specializes in all kinds of things for yards has some which truly tickle our fancy. There's one with the North, South, East and West pointers, surmounted by a spirited metal dog. Another which has only the one arrow has a very cocky looking bird perched on top of it.

Whether we're in the "vane" mood or not, there's so much of interest in the little shop we might easily regard it as a sort of guarantee against boredom and look forward to a pleasant stop here.

East is east, and west is west, and twain are meeting in a downtown store. A third floor department has just received some blouses which are true mimicries of the wild and woolly West. Bright red kerchiefs are fastened around the neck to take the place of a collar, and are knotted casually, in cowboy style at the side back. Waistbands are made of pliable knit wool to fit snugly across the top of the hips. These bizarre blouses come in red, green, blue, brown and beige, in practically any size.

Being hostess is more tempting than ever with the daring slippers designed especially for those leisurely, informal "at homes." A shop on F street has some which come in red, peony, or blue velvet, or black or white satin. They're extremely "cut out," but they have a dainty femininty that appeals to us. These slippers, or sandals, are particularly suited to tall women. Although they're designed for dressy hostess gowns, they have very low heels.

Another model appeals at first to be an intricate pattern of straps and bows. Two thin satin strips meeting over the toes, tie in a pert satin bow, while over the ankle more straps and more bows.

For a fluffy negligee a certain pair of satin mules, almost hidden under the large feathery fluff on the vamp, come in black, Nile green, French blue and tearose. They have the advantage over a great many mules by the heel strap, which gives them a bit of stability.

All of these are unexpectedly reasonably priced.

The life of a goldfish isn't half as uninteresting as it appears from our side of the glass bowl if we may judge by the numerous new devices for amusement which appear on the market to placate the goggly-eyed goldfish. A Connecticut avenue shop has a whole table covered with little air-filled glass bulbs which look like ice floats. On top of one lazily sprawls a miniature polar bear. On another is a pompous looking duck. There are several sizes and varieties.

I say, "Let's go to dinner, we'll

But afterward I wish that you
Were not so literal.

How to Keep Well

A Winter Sport.

Looking out of the car window a few days ago a group of boys were seen to be building a dyke. It was about 1 foot across at the base and 1 foot high, and 400 feet long. Being a rectangular wall, it inclosed a piece of flat ground about 100 feet square.

The boys were getting ready for ice skating. Probably they had formed a neighborhood skating club, or they could have been scholars from a nearby school. Probably they had located a vacant square and obtained the consent of the owner to use it for skating this winter. Building the levee had required only one afternoon, since there were many workers, and there was joy in the work. Within a week after the levee is built a committee will wait on the ward superintendent, the alderman, or the fire engine house nearby, and get a fireman to turn the water on in a fire plug and to flood the space with two to four inches of water. The cold weather will do the rest.

If the boys were experienced they removed all weeds and grass that stood up more than two inches, and after the first hard freeze they will have a smooth, hard skating rink with the ice resting on the ground and, therefore, with no danger of thin ice—and plunges into freezing water.

Soon they will be going there in the late afternoons and early evenings, enjoying an hour or two of healthful, muscle-building exercise in the open air instead of sitting sluggishly within doors. Few forms of play compare with skating, from the standpoint of physical benefit. While the leg muscles do most of the work of skating, the arms, body and neck muscles contribute no small part to the exercise. They are used to keep the body in balance and at the same time they help to propel. While the work is hard, it does not heat the body unduly, nor is it a great strain on the heart.

But, good as this is, the principal benefits of skating lie in another direction. It helps by what it prevents, as well as by direct action. In winter we need to be unhoused, to get into the open air, to overcome the effects of sluggishness, to get away from confined air and artificial heating. All these benefits accrue from skating. In addition, we build up capacity to make heat and to resist being chilled, and in doing this we insure against colds.

In the cities it should be possible to form a neighborhood club and to make a skating place on some vacant lot within each square mile. The boys in the towns that are without waterworks could devise means of making and flooding a small outdoor rink. The country boy can find ready made rinks nearby.

Ancient Passion Play To Be Seen in Bristol

Bristol, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Bristolians will be afforded their first opportunity of witnessing a great European Passion Play, first given in 1264, when the famous players from Freiburg, Germany, appear in performance here February 5 and 6, afternoon and evening, under auspices of the Bristol Lions Club.

The play will be in English, with the German cast to be supplemented by a group of 32 selected local singers under the direction of Prof. Frederick Martin, of Virginia Intermont College.

Folks Do Not Go to Dinners to Sample Food, But to Enjoy the Company, Mrs. Kahn Knows

Veteran Congress Hostess Tells How the Guests Should "Blend."

Contrasts Social Life of Present With That of Generation Ago.

By Frances Mangum.

It isn't the menu that matters when Representative Florence P. Kahn gives a party. It's the people.

On a drive from the House Office Building to a downtown "business meeting" Mrs. Kahn explained that she enjoyed entertaining because she felt she had a "secret formula."

"I discovered a long time ago," she declared, "that people don't go to parties to sample the food. They go because they enjoy the guests and hope to derive stimulation from the conversation.

"For that reason, when I entertain I scarcely give a thought to the menu. I try to see that it's properly balanced, cooked well and, of course, served properly. But I usually have simple food. No caviar, no quail on toast, nor humming bird tongues at my house!"

How Company Is Blended.

Mrs. Kahn chuckled. "But what I do give thought to," she continued, "are the guests. They blend like colors, I think. And, of course, I must never put red and yellow or brown and black together.

"I feel that every one's good time depends on how interested he or she is in the others. So I always try to arrange to have guests who are going to contribute one to the other. I've often noticed how attractive one type of person can make another. A really successful party is generally made up of a group of individuals, every one of whom sets off the other members."

"One of the most gracious compliments I've ever had," continued Mrs. Kahn, "was paid to me by a French woman. She was invited to a party given by a very wealthy woman. Very wealthy! And she was invited to mine. I naturally expected her to refuse my invitation; but, no, she accepted it.

How to Pick Your Party.

"That evening I asked her why she preferred coming to my party and she said: 'Ze other lady her parties are ver' nice. One sees much diamonds, much pearls. But when I come to your house you give me ze best you have. You give your own self. Ze other lady, she does not give diamonds and pearls!'"

Mrs. Kahn said she enjoyed going out to dinner, and giving dinners of her own. When it was suggested that such social activities must include a rather breath-taking wardrobe, she leaned back in the car and laughed heartily.

"Clothes are the least of my worries! I usually 'stock up,' so to speak, before I come East every year and what I get together then suffices. I have a very dependable dressmaker who takes care of me when I'm in California. All I have to do is call her up and say, 'I need a party dress, an evening dress, a street dress'—or whatever it is I want, and she goes down and picks out the material and the pattern. All I do is try it on!

One Dress She Copied.

"Really, I haven't picked out a pattern for years. I did have a dress copied, though. One night I met a friend I hadn't seen in years and I was crazy about the dress she had on and told her so. 'You have very good taste,' she told me, 'It's a Schiaparelli model!'"

"I asked her if she minded if I copied it. She was very sweet to me and said she didn't. That's about the only dress I can remember deciding on for myself.

"I'm not bragging," Mrs. Kahn said, quite seriously. "You can tell by just looking at me that I wear whatever is handed out!"

As she spoke, she looked down at the folds of her black satin dress which fitted loosely but becomingly. A small black turban hat worn low over her forehead, formed a striking contrast to her soft white hair.

Mrs. Kahn seemed surprised to hear that she was generally known as the wit of the House. "I like to joke and jolly a bit," she admitted. "It helps me through a lot of rough places. Sometimes I've come up against men who were outwardly old grouches, but after a bit of jollity they dropped that shell altogether and turned out to be amazingly amiable."

Mrs. Kahn said she had always liked society, but that it seemed to her social life now compared with that of 20 years ago is as different as black from white. Just as pleasant, perhaps, but not the same.

"I suppose it was simpler then," she explained. "Why I can remember when I used to go up to Franklin Square with a group of friends and we'd wheel the baby carriages up and down, laugh and talk and just have a marvelous time!"

The Winning Line of Play.

When several lines of play are open to a Declarer, the success of any one of them being dependent upon the opposing cards being divided in a certain manner, there is a considerable amount of guesswork involved. In other words, knowledge of the correct technique will very frequently not suffice if the player is unable to make some approximate guess as to the opponents' distribution. On the hand below South made a very lucky decision, based upon some logic, and fulfilled his plan with faultless technique.

South, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♡ | 1♠ | 3◇ | Pass |
| 3♡ | Pass | 4♡ | Pass |
| 5♣ | Pass | 6♡ | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

The bidding needs no particular comment. After North's Forcing bid and subsequent heart support South, with considerably more than a minimum hand, decides he must make a mild Slam try, which North immediately accepts. North does not bid four notrump, despite his holding of three Aces, as in case South has a minimum hand, he does not wish to arbitrarily push the contracting up to the level of five.

West's Opening lead was the Queen of clubs, which Declarer won in his own hand. A glance at Dummy told South that the contract could be made very simply on a simble cross-ruff, provided East held three or more clubs, or, failing that, only a doubleton club, but no Ten of hearts. One round of trump was immediately played, and both opponents followed. At this point South indulged in some serious guesswork and, despite the fact that he made a lucky decision. He had a sound basis of logic to go by. West, an eminently sound player, had overcalled vulnerable with a suit headed by no better than the King-Knave-Ten and no outside high cards. Therefore West's hand must be fortified by unusual distribution, and it was likely, particularly after the Opening club lead into Souths' hand, that West held five clubs, and that a normal line of play would be doomed to defeat. South therefore tackled the hand from an entirely different angle.

After drawing one round of trump South played the Ace and King of diamonds and his second high club, and ruffed a third round of clubs with the Ace of hearts in Dummy. He now proceeded to play out his remaining hearts, and West was completely squeezed. He was forced to hold a high club and a guard for his spade King, which he did, even though he inwardly knew that all was lost. At trick 11, Declarer led out his last club, and West won, but was now forced to lead away from the King of spades. Declarer played low from Dummy and won the twelfth trick with the Queen in his own hand, the Ace of spades naturally taking the last trick. It is easily seen that had South adopted the simpler and probably equally sound line of play of a simple cross-ruff, he would have been over-ruffed by the Ten of hearts on the third round of the suit and still have found himself with a spade loser.

Tomorrow's Hand.

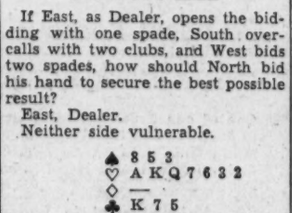
If East, as Dealer, opens the bidding with one spade, South overcalls with two clubs, and West bids two spades, how should North bid his hand to secure the best possible result?

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

New Children's Party Frocks Are Dressy But Not Fussy, New York Fashions Show

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 29.—Whether she can't sleep in excited anticipation of her very first party, or whether she's reached the blase, somewhat bored heights of 12 or so, there's one thing both ages have in common. And that's the essential simplicity of the dresses they wear to their parties.

Being dressed up doesn't mean fussed up. Whatever is done in the way of decoration to make smart children's party clothes look different from everyday fashions, there isn't too much of it.

Take ruffles, for example, a favorite trimming on little girls' dresses. If a tiny frock is ruffled around the neckline, over the shoulders and around the bottom, the ruffles are small and fine and they're just about all the trimming the dress has.

Or a dress may have quite a complicated pattern of smocking (as has the dress on the smaller girl in the sketch) but nothing on the skirt.

Party dresses look dressed up because of their materials and colors as much as anything. Crepe de chine is undoubtedly the most fashionable material, both for two-to-sixers and for sisters not quite in their 'teens.

Organdie, dotted Swiss and embroidered cottons are smart for little girls, too, while some of the older ones go in for the crinkled crepes, ribbed crepes and taffetas which are used by their elders.

The littler the girl, the lighter the color of her dress, is the general rule. Pink, turquoise, pale green and yellow are about all you'd notice at a fashionable party for the very young.

Older girls . . . up to 12 . . . like pastels, too, but they also look smart in some of the deeper colors . . . noticeably red, bright blue and gay green.

These party dresses may be either plain color or in a print. For very little girls, tiny flower designs are favorite. But for older girls there are any number of print designs which look quite like grown-up print frocks.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Seized by a band of masked men as he motors toward London from a visit in rural England, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, home secretary, is told he will be put to death unless he grants a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, doomed to be hanged the next morning for the murder of one of his wife's friends. Rossiter refuses, is placed on an improvised gallows and—a messenger arrives with word that Mrs. Brandt is waiting at the home secretary's London residence, eager to tell the true story behind the slaying.

Rossiter agrees to grant a reprieve to Brandt if the woman's story implies justification in the shooting. The mysterious band releases him. At London, Mrs. Brandt tells him that her husband killed Gervase Benham in a fit of jealous anger. Finding his suspicions unjustified Brandt demanded that his wife preserve silence to shield herself.

Sir Humphrey promises Katherine Brandt, an old friend, he will grant a reprieve. She departs and he picks up his telephone—and collapses, faints. When he regains consciousness Brandt has been hanged. Later Mrs. Brandt tells him that she believed her husband insane and did not desire to live. Later, invited to dinner by Sir Humphrey, she vanishes. Scotland Yard operatives summoned to Sir Humphrey's home find the home secretary missing. The prime minister demands that every effort be made to find Rossiter.

"We certainly have," Smithers admitted. "It makes the thing still more diabolically difficult. I suppose it must be the same gang who have got hold of Sir Humphrey again—but what for? The obvious idea is, of course, vengeance, because Brandt was not reprived, but they know so much that they must know it was not Sir Humphrey's fault."

"We were wondering, coming up, sir, if there was anything in Mrs. Brandt's disappearance which would help us."

"You had better go and see Cowling and join up with him," Col. Matterson suggested. "You may be able to help one another. If you stumble across any fresh idea, come up to me at once, and if I have gone come after me to my house in Hyde Park terrace. I have to breakfast with the prime minister tomorrow morning and to take him your news, and he won't like it."

"I'm very sorry, sir," Inspector Smithers sighed, as he rose to his feet.

"We shall pull it off yet, sir," Simpson declared, but his tone lacked hopefulness.

Pank said nothing. • • •

Very Disappointing.

"Well, what do you think of that, Matterson?" his chief asked, after the door had been closed.

"I think that it's very disappointing," was the frank reply. "I know very little about Pank. He went along with them chiefly because he knows the country so well, but he has brought off one or two very simple affairs quite creditably. Smithers and Simpson, though, I can not understand. Not a theory from either of them! Not a suggestion."

"Damnable!" the chief commissioner muttered. "I don't mind telling you that Downing street is fuming."

Matterson leaned back in his chair dejectedly.

"We have combed every garage in London, Newmarket, Thetford, Norwich, Royston and Barnet," he announced. "We have very discreetly offered a reward of £250 for information regarding the car. We have visited every nursing home, private or public, and every hospital. We have had over 200 men—our own and locals—watching at the various ports.

We have under observation every one of the crooks in London who would be likely to be concerned in an affair like this. We have a splendid fingerprint impression on the sash of the window in Chestow Square, but we have nothing corresponding to it in our archives, and for all we know it may be the thumb and finger of Sir Humphrey himself. We have got to have a bit of luck about this, or I'm afraid we shall be in the cart."

Elopement Doubted.

"You don't think," the chief commissioner suggested, "that Rossiter went off with Katherine Brandt?"

"Why the devil should he?" Matterson asked petulantly. "There is nothing whatever to prevent their being married at St. George's, Hanover Square, any moment they like.

What inducement could there have been for him to have stepped out of his window in his dinner clothes, leaving me in the next room, and bolting from his own house? The thing is ridiculous. Besides, that would not cast the least light upon his first abduction which, after all, is the keynote to the whole thing."

"Every idea concerning the entire business is ridiculous when it's put into words," Gen. Moore declared, savagely, "I don't mind a complicated case, but this one is a sheer absurdity. Nothing could have happened that did. There is no possible reason for anything that has happened. • • • Who the hell is this? Come in!"

Entirely contrary to etiquette, the door was opened, and Detective Pank made timid entrance.

Chapter IX.

Detective Pank came very nervously forward. The chief commissioner in a temper was enough to frighten any one, and his appearance at that moment seemed to indicate that he was in a very bad temper indeed.

"Well, what do you want, Pank?" he asked, gruffly. "This in entirely against the rules, you know, for you to come in like this."

"I know it, sir," was the hesitating reply. "I'm sorry. I wished to have a word with either you or Col. Matterson, if you will favor me, while the others were engaged."

"What is it that you want?" the general demanded. "Got something up your sleeve, eh? Out with it if you have, and I will forgive you for anything."

"It's not exactly that, sir," Pank confessed. "I have come to ask you if you will be good enough to dismiss me from the force."

"Dismiss you!" the general repeated, in surprise.

Col. Matterson looked up from the letter he had begun to write. He knew more about Detective Pank than his chief.

"What's the trouble, Pank?" he inquired.

"Get Your Breath."

"Leave off twiddling with your hat, man, and sit down and get your breath. We are not going to eat you," the general said, looking very much as though he were. "If you have any ideas about this case we are only too anxious to hear what you have to say, although I don't see why you didn't speak up while the others were here."

Detective Pank placed his hat upon the carpet and sat down in the nearest chair.

"It's like this, sir," he commenced, addressing the chief commissioner; "I'd like to be dismissed from the force temporarily so as to be free to tackle this job from outside."

"Explain yourself to Col. Matterson," the general enjoined. "I don't interfere personally in these matters. Address yourself to him, and I feel sure you will find him reasonable."

"Well, sir, it's like this," Pank explained, turning toward the subcommissioner: "Whenever there's a delicate investigation to be made, rather out of the ordinary run, I have always found that it handicaps us when people know that we are from the Yard. Supt. Smithers and Inspector Simpson are first-class men without a doubt, but they were both in Norwich not long ago on another case and nearly every one knows them by sight. Apart from that, they went everywhere as Scotland Yard men, and wherever they went people knew that Scotland Yard men were coming, and sometimes I'm not sure that that is an advantage."

Familiar With City.

"I see your point," the colonel agreed.

"I know every inch of Norwich city," Pank went on, "and I know the country all around Keynsham Hall. There is not a country house or a large farmhouse within a possible radius, taking Sir Humphrey's time as being correct, where there could have been a room such as he described, opening out onto a courtyard large enough to have contained an execution shed."

"Why didn't you tell the others so then?"

"I did tell them before we started out. Of course, they were my superior officers and they took very little notice of what I said. I went with them on the first of their rounds, and then I developed a feverish cold and went to bed until yesterday."

"Did you have a cold?" the subcommissioner asked, his eyes very set and intent under his beetling eyebrows.

"No, sir. I wanted to keep out of the way and to make a few investigations on my own account."

"Was that quite in accordance with etiquette and your position?" was the somewhat stiff inquiry. "You were there to help the other two to the best of your ability."

"Quite true," sir," Pank assented eagerly, "and I have worried very much about the whole business. The only thing was that I said to myself—the case is the thing. Nothing counts except solving this mystery, and it doen't matter how we do it or who does it."

Known in Hotel.

"I said to myself," Pank went on, with increased confidence, "Smithers and Simpson are known to every one in this hotel—we were staying at the Royal, sir—to every one at the hotel and most of the people who go into the bars, as Scotland Yard detectives. Wherever they went they were marked men. Norwich is a good sized city, sir, but in a way it is just like an overgrown country town. It's the greatest place for gossip I ever knew. I knew quite well from one or two things that had occurred to me—they may be perfectly ridiculous and I shan't, unless you insist upon it, tell you now what they were—but I knew that I could do no good if I went about with two well known Scotland Yard detectives or if I was seen with them in the city or thereabouts. That is the reason, sir, I went to bed with a cold and came away on the train before theirs."

"I always said," Matterson remarked, turning toward his chief, "that there was just a little too much of the Bucket type about Simpson."

The chief commissioner nodded.

"Get on with it, Pank," he invited.

"Now, as things are," the latter went on, "there's scarcely a soul in the city who saw me with Smithers and Simpson; and as for the country people, I'm not minding so much about them just now. There are many of my friends down there, of course, who knew that I came up to London to be a policeman, but none of them knew that I was going into the detective service. What I would like to do, sir, if you would be so good as to kick me out of the force, is to go back to Norwich as a commercial traveler, or anyhow with a civilian job.

Walking With Janet.

You who pass life's marvels by
With never a raising of the eye,
May think there's nothing strange or new
Or beautiful in town to view.
Beset with heartaches or with cares
Or busy with your own affairs.
'Tis possible you've grown inclined
To gaze at splendors, partly blind,
And think as duties stern you face
The world is dull and commonplace.
If this is now your point of view
You need a child to walk with you.

When I with Janet visit town
And walk the big streets up and down
She pulls me here and hauls me there
To gaze at treasures wondrous rare.
At charms I've missed for many a day
In admiration I must stay.
I would have said there could not be
So much in all this world to see
As Janet finds to praise and please.
I'll swear on every side she sees
Of lovely things an endless list
Which in my blindness I'd have missed.

With Ohs! and Ah! of real delight
She drags me to the left and right,
And everywhere she looks around
Another miracle is found.
To her the world is beautiful
And never dismal, drab or dull.
She races here and races there
To find enchantments everywhere,
And oft unto myself I say:
"Would I could walk the world this way
And always find and never tire
So much of beauty to admire.

"America Is the Country for Women," Wife of Minister From Switzerland Declares

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Introduce Mountain Music

Her Address Will Initiate Broadcast Series to Rescue Melodies.

(Associated Press.)

To the rest of the country, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will introduce on February 21 the mountaineer music which delighted her last August, when she visited the White Top folk music festival near Abingdon, Va.

She announced yesterday at her press conference she had promised to initiate with an address in the White House a series of seven broadcasts to be made by folk singers at Richmond, Va., and one at Nashville, Tenn., with orchestral introductions from New York. The concerts will be carried by the National Broadcasting Co.

To further this music-culture movement, Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday introduced to her press conference its organizer, John Powell, of Richmond, Va., one of the few men who has thus far appeared in that feminine forum.

"People are beginning to realize much so-called 'hill billy' music is not representative," Powell said. "Our purpose is to present the true folk music, which comes from the same sources as English speech, and which goes back at least two centuries to be authentic.

"It has been found in the mountains, because people have gone there to look for it. It can be found just as well on the Northern Neck, or the Eastern Shore. I have found some of the very best examples right in the city of Richmond."

The Nashville, Tenn., broadcast, Powell said, will be by the harp singers. Those from Richmond will be chiefly by the talent that Mrs. Roosevelt heard last summer, when she went to visit her father's old home at Abingdon, Va., and its near-by mountain festival.

First Lady Objects To Portraits of Self

Declares She Never Has Sat for Painting.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has a "deep-rooted objection" to portraits of herself, she announced with vehemence at her press conference yesterday.

Questioned about a new portrait that is reported in process of completion, the President's wife said that she never in her life had sat for a portrait.

"And there's one portrait in this house that I'd like to take out and drop in the Potomac," she added.

She explained that the one now occupying a place of honor in the White House was painted, at the instigation of her children, from photographs. The artist only saw her once, said the First Lady, at a public reception.

Mrs. Lawson-Johnson Visits in Washington

Mrs. Ormand Lawson-Johnson, of London, England, who has been spending the past few weeks in New York with her daughter, Mrs. George Grant Mason, jr., who is recovering from injuries suffered in a serious accident in June last year, has arrived in Washington and is spending a few days at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. Lawson-Johnson will join her on Thursday and together they will go to Florida to spend the month of February. During their stay in Florida they will make a brief visit to Havana to be the guest of Mrs. Lawson-Johnson's son-in-law, Mr. George Grant Mason, jr., who has made several short visits to New York to see Mrs. Mason since she was injured.

Mrs. Mason, formerly Miss Jane Kendall, of Washington, will remain in New York until she has completely recovered, and is expected to return to Havana with Mr. Mason early in May.

Kendricks to Name Son After Surgeon General

Mr. and Mrs. Manville Kendrick are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son Friday afternoon in Garfield Hospital. The baby will be named Hugh Smith Cumming for his maternal grandfather, the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service. Mr. and Mrs. Kendrick have another son, John B. Kendrick 2d, who is named for his paternal grandfather, the late Senator John B. Kendrick, of Wyoming. Mrs. Kendrick formerly was Miss Diana Cumming.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendrick have been in Washington visiting the Surgeon General and Mrs. Cumming since early December.

Red Cross Assistance Corps Luncheon Today

The Staff Assistant Corps of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross will give a luncheon today at the Highlands, at 12:45 o'clock. Those attending will be Mrs. Anthony Hyde, chairman; Mrs. William Willard and Miss Elizabeth Brawner, vice chairman; Miss Mary S. Birdsall, Miss Mary Henry, Miss Frances Hill, Miss Jean Peeples, Miss Jeanne Richards, Miss Lilla LeGarde, Miss Ruth Reilly, Miss Justine Corby, Miss Anne Park and Mrs. Abbott Mills.

Folk Melodies Will Be Basis For Real Music of America

Sponsor of Revival Efforts Sees Doom of Crooner and Blues Singer.

The crooner and torch singer are doomed. Nasal tenors and throaty contraltos who moan "Am I Blue?" will soon be past history. For a great revival of American folk music is on; and these songs will furnish the basis for a new school of music which will preserve American traditions and reflect American life.

That is the belief of Mrs. Annabel Morris Buchanan, of Marion, Va. Mrs. Buchanan, who is an ardent sponsor of the revival movement, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. King-Smith at their studio here. She is giving a series of lectures on "Virginia Folk Music," at the studio.

"I feel that a knowledge of the folk music of a nation is just as important as a knowledge of the spoken language," Mrs. Buchanan said yesterday.

Neglected Home Field.

"All the greatest composers in the past have taken their themes from their national music, but our own composers have neglected the rich sources of material in their own land and have gone to other countries for their inspiration. They are doing themselves a great injustice in this.

"We are especially interested in preserving the Anglo-Saxon folk music which is found in the southern mountains. There is other folk music in this country which is important. But the basic stock of our population is Anglo-Saxon, and it is right that we should be interested in preserving this heritage."

Mrs. Buchanan told how she first became interested in the revival of American folk music.

20,000 Attend Festival.

"When we were planning for the State festival in Virginia four years ago, we felt that we should have something that was truly Virginian," she said. "And Mr. John Powell, a famous Richmond musician, suggested that we have some mountain musicians give their native songs. Interest in the movement has grown constantly, and last year at the White Top Mountain Festival more than 20,000 people were present. We are expecting even greater things in the future.

"I have a grand time going around collecting music," Mrs. Buchanan said. "The real mountaineers are highly cultivated, and interesting people. They may be unlettered but they are not uncultured. They can trace their families back for many generations, and most of them come from pure Anglo-Saxon stock. Many of them have English accents.

"They have an excellent sense of what is good in music, and they refuse to give collectors music which they do not feel is fine. I was especially amused when Council Cruise, a mountaineer who helps me in collecting, refused to give me a certain ballad.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Buchanan," he said. "But you don't want that song. It has been degredated right down!"

"I collect dance tunes as well as songs and ballads. One of the most interesting is a little tune which has been handed down since the time of Prince Charlie. It is supposed to be sung when the "Bird in the Cage" and the "Twistification" are danced. One verse goes:

"I don't want none of your weavily wheat.
"I don't want none of your barley.
"I don't want none of your weavily wheat,
"To make a cake for Charley.

"There are immense possibilities for all kinds of art in America folklore," Mrs. Buchanan continued. "Last year a young artist, Berkely Williams went along when we went collecting music, and he painted several pictures. Everyone of these has won recognition. And art galleries in many cities have written asking to exhibit them. So you can see that music is not the only art which is enriched by drawing from native sources."

Folk Opera Acclaimed.

"The interest in collecting folk music has constantly broadened since it's beginning," Mrs. Buchanan said. "And artists are now engaged in other phases of it. Lamar Stringfield, of Chapel Hill, N. C., has written a folk opera which has been received with great acclaim.

Classes in folk study have been formed all over the country. John Powell is now writing a folk symphony in which he is using the folk modes in order to demonstrate the possibilities of folk music as a basis for American composition.

"We feel certain," she concluded, "that there is no greater charm than that demonstrated in the simplicity and sincerity of folk music."

New Beach Shoes Quite Peek-a-Boo

Tiny Mirrors Are Flashing on Dancing Slippers.

Other evening slippers, nothing more than a series of glittering straps attached to the sole, are heelless and open at the toe.

Persian brocade, satin and crepes also are popular for evening slippers.

For afternoon wear, a wide variety of shoes in white kid, linens, piques and color combinations are on display. Many slippers exactly match the costume, with the colonial heel favored.

The sensible all white, spiked sport shoe lessens the burden of trudging about a golf course. For those who form the gallery, sports shoes of modish color combination to match the ensemble are offered.

Infant Training Schools Projected Here

Teachers Now Are Studying for Novel Enterprise CWA Will Create.

A nation of happy, independent persons who have been trained from earliest childhood to live in harmony with others is the goal toward which leaders in the movement for nursery schools and child development are working.

The work of these schools has been so profitable and constructive that a fund has been set aside by the officials of the Civil Works Administration to establish free nursery schools in the District of Columbia. Teachers for these schools are now being trained at the National Child Research Center, 3209 Highland place.

The purpose of these schools is two-fold: To give work to unemployed teachers and to improve the environment and training of children. The nursery schools also will provide care for children whose mothers must be employed during the day.

Yesterday Miss Adelia Boynton, director of the research center, told of the work planned and accomplished in nursery schools today.

Parent Education.

"The nursery school does not attempt to take the place of the home," she said. "It is our wish to correlate home and school training. And so an important part of our work is in parent education. Parents must realize the need of teaching their children to live on a regular schedule, and to develop personal and social habits which will aid in a normal healthy attitude toward life.

"The first step in the training of a small child is to take it for granted that he will behave well. Do not worry about meeting problems until they are really problems.

"Then put the child on a regular schedule and assume that he will keep that schedule. Then adopt an unemotional attitude and be firm in training him."

Making a child self-reliant so that in later life he will not be a clinging vine on the members of his family is one of the first things stressed in the nursery schools. The children in these schools are taught even at the age of 18 months the minimum age for entrance, that they must pick up their toys when they have finished their play.

Steps in Discipline.

The next step in training the small child, according to Miss Boynton, is to teach him to dress himself.

"If he is given a chance he will take pride in doing things for himself," she said. "It is not necessary to praise children for behaving as they should.

"It is quite true that a child's character is largely developed before he is 6 years old. However, that was not realized until the past few years, and consequently many children developed habits in these formative years which they were never able to outgrow.

Education of Future Citizens of Nation Will Begin in Babyhood.

"One cause for child delinquency today is that the economic and social system does not permit the modern mother to give the child the necessary training in the early period of his life.

"Another reason parents have difficulty in training their children is that they themselves do not have definite ideas about what they wish to teach their children. It is impossible to lead a child firmly toward a certain goal if you do not have the goal fixed.

Isolation As Remedy.

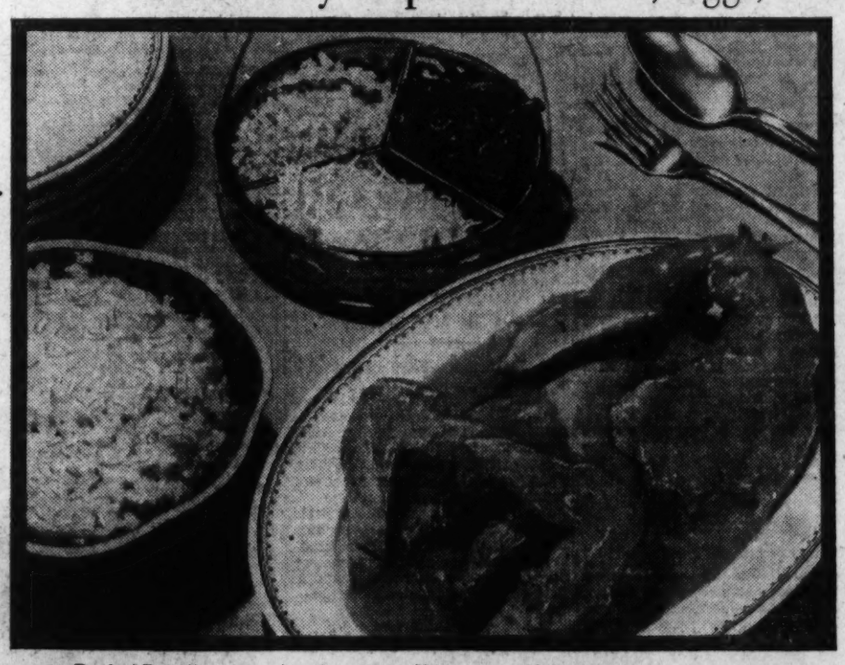
"Then, too, the nursery school can do much for children that their own parents can not because the teachers do not have the emotional conflicts and ties which parents have.

"Children develop as individuals by association with persons their own age. Children like to associate with other children, and one of the most effective ways of curing a child of bad habits is through isolation. For instance, a child has tantrums. Very well. We just leave him alone and say, 'if you wish to cry you must cry alone. We want to be happy, and we will not associate with cross children.' Usually this will teach a child that bad behavior does not pay."

Miss Boynton concluded that it was not possible to give definite rules which would cure certain habits in every child.

"One of the most important things we have learned in dealing with children of the preschool age is that they are not all alike," she said. "Each one is a distinct personality and there is a different way of teaching each one. And, of course, while we have made much progress, there are still many things we do not know about child psychology. It is a constantly changing and growing subject."

Mysterious Oriental Flavor Furnishes Charm That Curry Imparts to Meats, Eggs, Fish



By Ann Barrett.

Did you like your first olive? Most people don't. Same with curry. But there's something about curry dishes that's likely to get you if you give them a chance. A sort of mysterious Oriental flavor (curry powder comes from the Far East). A charm that inspires such traveled people as Banker Frank A. Vanderlip (who have tasted the world's most famous dishes right where they were born) to put good curries in the front rank of good things to eat.

Two tricks of making curries good are: First, to cook the curry powder thoroughly in the sauce, so as to smooth off the sharp edges of its flavor. And second, to mellow this flavor still more with a bit of coconut milk, apple or banana. And two ways to help yourself to like it (if you don't already) are: First, don't use too much curry powder (it's powerful hot). Second, serve your curry in a ring of rice cooked dry and fluffy. And pass with it any or all of these relishes: Chutney pickle, grated fresh coconut, preserved pineapple or ginger, chopped peanuts.

Lamb, chicken, fish and eggs are the best-liked main ingredients for curries. But you may use beef, veal and pork, too. Or a mixture of meats. You may cook these main ingredients right in the sauce (this makes the richest curry) or cook them separately and then heat them in the sauce. You may use left-over cooked meat or fowl, too (just heat it in the sauce). About 2½ cups of cooked meat (cut in cubes) are needed for the sauce recipe given here. This serves four people.

And here's how the sauce goes: First melt 3 tablespoons butter slowly so as not to burn it. Add 2 tablespoons grated onion and curry powder from ¾ to 4 tablespoons. (Only ¾ tablespoon for beginners, 2 tablespoons for average taste and 4 tablespoons for dyed-in-the-wool curry fans.) Blend this mixture thoroughly, then cook it over a low fire (so as not to brown or burn it) for 5 minutes. Then blend in 3½ tablespoons flour and add 2 cups rich chicken stock (or 1 cup stock and 1 cup milk, or 2 cups milk alone). Cook till thickened, stirring constantly. Then add 1 teaspoon salt (if stock was not already salted), ¼ cup sieved banana or ¼ cup grated raw apple. Simmer several minutes, then add ¼ cup cream.

Next put in the main ingredient. If this is already cooked (as in the case of 6 hard-cooked eggs, quartered) or 2½ cups of cubed cooked meat, let it heat in sauce very slowly (about 10 minutes).

For curried dishes above all (since they are Eastern in origin) you want your rice cooked dry and fluffy. And here's an easy way to do it: First bring 3 cups water to a boil in top of double boiler. Add to this (slowly, so as not to stop boiling) 1 cup rice, washed. Set this over direct flame and boil about 1 minute. Then set it over boiling water, add 1 teaspoon salt, and let it steam till it absorbs all the water (about 45 minutes).

Make a nice ring of this (on a hot platter or chop plate) by molding it 'round the outside of an inverted bowl set in center of plate. Then take away bowl, turn the curry mixture into the center of rice ring, and you're ready for eating. (Remember the relishes mentioned above.) After this main dish (pretty rich and gooey) it's best to serve a crisp salad. Say quartered slices of pineapple, tomatoes cut in wedges, and thin slices of cucumber (with skin left on—very pretty)! Toss these in a bowl with good French dressing, and serve on crisp lettuce.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If January 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 2 to 3 p. m. and from 8 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m.

If you were born on January 30, you are a very capricious individual. Environment exercises a tremendous influence over your personality. If you were for any length of time in a religious atmosphere, you would soon react to it. On the other hand, if you lived with a happy go-lucky crowd, it would not be long for its influence to be discernible. Avoid mixing in crowds on this date and carelessly carrying your money, for there is danger of pickpockets.

The child born on January 30 will become a source of continuous delight to its parents. It will, as soon as it is old enough to appreciate what is being done for it, display a very deep sense of appreciation for everything it receives. This will be its outstanding characterization throughout its entire life. This disposition will make people go out of their way to do favors for it. Our success in life depends largely upon the favors others grant us. This child's willingness to always express its thanks means its path on this sphere will be an easy one.

The woman born on January 30 possesses a world of understanding and sympathy. If this date is your birthday, you are of the type that finds the greatest happiness when you are doing for, or giving to, friends. Matrimony will give you a mate who will understand and appreciate your aims. You are better qualified for home than you are for business duties.

The man born on January 30 is inclined to let himself be too easily sold the ideas of others. Exercise more independence in your thinking, drawing your own conclusions, and standing pat on them, regardless of what other opinions are thrust upon you. You should exercise care that you do not let gratitude for past favors cause you to be overindulgent in business affairs. Let matrimonial bonds enmesh you early in life, for your wife's advice will save you from making a good many mistakes. This is a case where two heads are better than one.

People born on January 30 are not the sort that nature intended to lead solitary lives. Companionship is most essential for their happiness, as they depend on others to a great extent for both advice and guidance. For this reason it is best that they place themselves under the loving care of a wife or husband, as the case may be, whose interests are interwoven with their own. Love's promptings are sincere and unselfish.

Successful people born on January 30:

Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States.

Frank G. Johnson, inventor.

Walter J. Damrosch, composer.

Oziel Wilkinson, manufacturer.

Home of Diplomatic Couple Reflects the Culture of Their Homeland; Its Chatelaine Is Skilled in Needlepoint Embroidery and Many Examples of Her Work Are Seen.

A sympathetic interest in the women of other countries seems a natural concomitant with the increasing social consciousness of the modern American woman. She will find the answer to her wonderment about the lives of women in far lands in this series of interviews with hostesses in the Diplomatic Corps in Washington. While it was the intention of the Woman's Page to present this series in the sequence of the diplomatic ranking of the hostesses interviewed, fortuitous circumstance has made this program impossible, as in today's instance. With the gracious consent of Mme. Peter, we are today presenting her story, which was first scheduled to appear yesterday.

By Elizabeth Young.

Their altogether charming home at No. 6 Kalorama Circle is an exquisite and accurate reflection of the broad culture and community of interests shared by Mme. Peter and her husband, the Minister of Switzerland.

Since the first years of her marriage, Mme. Peter has been collecting rare old Swiss earthenware, much of which a museum might covet; remarkable example of the early Swiss glassmakers' art, pewter which tells its own story of an ancient nation's gracious way of living, and delightful colored prints showing the modes and manners of the Switzerland of another day.

These priceless treasures are so skillfully combined with a corresponding motif of gracious dignity and comfort as to achieve an atmosphere of intimate charm rarely encountered.

Scattered about the spacious living room on the first floor are gems of needlepoint embroidery, upholstering chairs and covering cushions. The needlepoint was worked by Mme. Peter during the years her two sons were growing up. And she professes to find nothing remarkable about her mastery of this beautiful craft.

Needlecraft Not Elective.

"While I always liked needlework, I am sure I was not at all clever as compared with others of my friends in Switzerland," she said, "They made such difficult and beautiful things."

All carefully brought up young girls in her country are tutored in such feminine accomplishments as needlecraft, music, languages, a knowledge of cooking and the broad general requirements of supervising a well-ordered home.

That Mme. Peter is an accomplished musician is a fact well known to all her friends, but which she would be the first to disclaim.

She spends a great deal of time at the piano, playing her beloved Bach for her own amusement, and, as she said, with her blue eyes twinkling gaily, "keeping up my music for the good of my old age!"

One of the most delightful aspects of America, in her opinion, is the opportunity afforded for the enjoyment and study of good music. She feels her own understanding of the technique of music has been tremendously developed since coming to Washington. She has lived here 14 years.

Rare Book Collection.

"The orchestra music, the symphonies one hears here are really marvelous," she said. "American people have a sincere appreciation of and interest in great music."

Brought up among books and surrounded by the best in the world's literature since her marriage, Mme. Peter knows well the profound enjoyment which reading affords. She reads everything—biography, history, poetry, fiction. One of her ambitions is to translate into French the masterpieces of other languages.

The Minister of Switzerland has made the collection of rare volumes a lifetime hobby, and is a connoisseur of art as well. The walls of the living room are hung with a superb collection of oils, representing the genius of many countries—in this and other centuries. Mme. Peter shares the minister's enjoyment of these hobbies.

During the years she has lived in this country, Mme. Peter has never ceased to marvel at the spirit of youth, enterprise and versatility which seems to motivate American women.

America Woman's Country.

"American women are so beautiful, so young in spirit. They have such eclat! I have often said that America is the country for women. Opportunities for self-expression and advancement for women seem to be much greater here than anywhere else in the world."

She thinks it may have been the need of resourcefulness on the part of our women in the early struggle to civilize the vast wilderness of America, which liberated them from the continental tradition of confining their activities to the home.

Mme. Peter, whose father was one of Switzerland's presidents, was educated in the tradition that woman's ideal career is that of wife and mother. She has always adored doing things for children, and now that her sons are grown, she has two small grandchildren.

They are the Mademoiselles Jeanne and Helene Peter, whose father is an engineer with an architectural firm in Boston. Jeanne, named for her grandmother, is almost four; Helene is yet a baby.

Training of Children.

Mme. Peter holds with modern psychologists that grandparents should be careful not to spoil their grandchildren with over-indulgent affection.

"While they have the right and the duty to love their grandchildren, they can be wise in the ways they show their love," she said. "When children recognize in their parents the source of unquestioned social authority, I think they learn more quickly the lesson of social discipline and are happier children."

Discussing the women of Switzerland, their traditions and ideals, Mme. Peter said they were not dissimilar to the women of America.

"Charming people of equal opportunity are just the same the world over, don't you think?" she asked. "Our very good friends here are extraordinarily like our very good friends in Switzerland."

Farm Products Bridge Prizes At Novel Party

Fashionably Gowned Women Vie for Cottage Cheese, Jelly, Butter, Eggs.

In the atmosphere of a county fair, fashionably gowned women played bridge yesterday afternoon at the National Woman's Country Club. On tables near the bridge players were displays of cottage cheese, country butter and eggs and exhibits of jelly, preserves and piccalilli. These farm products, which constitute the bridge prizes, were as eagerly played for as if they had been Venetian glass or Chinese pottery.

The party was given for the benefit of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, an organization which seeks to raise the standards of housewifery and encourage handicraft among rural women. Mrs. Henry Ford is the National president. Mrs. Otto L. Veerhoff is president of the National Capital branch, which embraces Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

The prizes for the bridge party were contributed by farm women in the National Capital division and represented their choicest culinary and handicraft products. The donors of the prizes came in person to the party to distribute their gifts.

The proceeds of the party will be used to finance The Homemaker, National magazine for rural housewives, which is published and distributed under the auspices of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association.

Fifty tables of bridge were played. The hospitality committee of the National Capital branch, consisting of Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Grady G. Ruttencutter and Mrs. Veerhoff was in charge of the event. The committee was assisted by Mrs. Charles L. McNary, chairman of the organization committee.

Stars Continue to Desert Hollywood for Broadway—Warners Sign Maxine Doyle

Living Theater Attracts More Film Notables

Some to Appear Here Soon Maxine Hit on Radio; About Showshops.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

Some weeks ago this department commented upon the sudden exodus of stage-trained actors from Hollywood and the consequent renaissance of the Broadway stage. It was pointed out that the stage's gain was by no means the cinema's loss because all of the stars probably had left several finished pictures on the shelves of the producers and would be back to make more before their absence had ever been noted by the picture-going public.

That hegira from the West Coast to the East now has taken on almost the proportions of panic!

The craving for work before real audiences, present in the flesh, is principally responsible for the reversion of so many stage actors to type. After all, 90 per cent of the impulse that impels a person to become an actor is vanity, and vanity is ill-served in a studio where the only audience is one of mechanics and artisans!

This commuting back and forth from one seaboard to the other has become so habitual with so many actors of the first rank that contracts are now being insisted upon that definitely provide for this very thing. Few of the stars of the first flight are bound by agreements that call for so many pictures a year that they can not find time to make a surreptitious stage appearance now and again between their tours of duty before the cameras and microphones.

Salutary Arrangement.

This is a salutary arrangement for both branches of the theater. After all, again, the best possible training for the talking celluloids is stage training. The only known method of acquiring stage training is to appear on the stage. Ergo.

Will Rogers is one of the latest of the old-line stars to admit that he is "thinkin' some" of going back to the stage for a while. This is an inclination no doubt prompted, at least in part, by a feeling of loneliness and a vague consciousness of being left behind, now that those other two veteran troupers, May Robson and Lionel Barrymore, have left the tranquil environs of Hollywood for a new excursion into the land of the living drama.

Miss Robson, whose lifetime has been spent in the theater, left Hollywood recently for New York to appear in a sketch and the eldest Barrymore, likewise, is tuning up a condensed version of his former stage success, "The Copperhead," for a tour of personal appearances that will bring him to Washington late in February.

Miss Pickford a Hit.

Mary Pickford preceded both of them by several weeks and is well along toward creating a new career for herself, with characteristic public adulation, in a skit consisting principally of a scene from "A Church Mouse."

The flexible contract arrangement has made it possible, too, for Katharine Hepburn to embark upon her stage adventure in "The Lake," and similar advantages have accrued to Helen Hayes, Paul Muni, Otto Kruger, Barbara Stanwyck, Francis Lederer, the Czechoslovakian star, now to be seen in "Man of Two Worlds" on the screen at RKO-Keith's; Alice Brady Lupe Velez, Jimmy Durante and scores more.

Late word from Hollywood indicates that Ramon Novarro will depart next month for a resumption of his European concert tour that was begun last year, and that Jeanette MacDonald, unless she wins the stellar role in "The Merry Widow," will be off shortly also.

Diana Wynyard utilized her vacation from the films to appear in a play in England, and Warner Baxter would like to make a stage appearance but, so far, has not been able to secure the necessary leave of absence. George White, with a film contract, reserved his stage rights. June Knight, leading woman with Lew Ayres in "Cross Country Cruise," currently at the Rialto, is using a winter vacation to appear in a Miami, Fla., hotel and night club.

Hollywood Mainstays.

Two of the Hollywood mainstays of the stage as well as screen are Joe E. Brown and Edward Everett Horton—one of the principal laughmakers in "Easy to Love," with Mary Astor, Adolphe Menjou and Genevieve Tobin, at the Earle—both of whom star in legitimate productions between pictures. Mr. Horton ascribes his frequent defections from the films to fear that the public will tire of his face—a fear that was engendered immediately he saw the first screen test of himself!

The personal appearance tour is a profitable device by which many of the film people have prospered, among them Joan Blondell, Jimmy Dunn, Alice White, Roscoe Ates, Raquel Torres, Wheeler and Woolsey and any number of others.

While a great deal of deserved to-do is being made over the celebration of the birthday anniversary of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, tomorrow, January 30, it should not be lost sight of that that day and date also marks the natal day of City Manager Carter Barron, of the Loew organization in Washington. Mr. Barron with characteristic modesty, is keeping especially mum about it, in view of the present circumstances, but we are assured that the fact remains unaltered. Incidentally, Mr. Barron last week-end completed two full years as the representative of Loew's, Inc., in the Capital—another occasion for congratulation. Incidentally, once again, we are able to share some of Mr. Barron's pride in natal day, since our own falls on the same date as that of the other earlier Roosevelt who occupied the White House, Theodore Roosevelt, the rough-riding "T. R." Not that it matters.

The Love Birds—Tweet! Tweet!

One shudders to think that it might all have been a publicity stunt. Yet it seems all to have been done with mirrors and more or less—mostly more—a hoax.

We mean, of course, that trick separation of Lupe Velez, the Mexican firecracker, and Johnny Weissmuller, the piscatorial Tarzan. This irreparable schism lasted a sum total of one day, according to authentic advices speeding East by wire from Hollywood.

Last Wednesday the flashing Mexican movie actress announced formally that she and her husband had parted.

"It's a trial separation for two weeks," Miss Velez said, "and if our marital relations haven't improved by then, I'll sue for divorce."

Weissmuller, swimming star and actor, followed this with a statement of his own. He said he was moving out of the faimly domicile in Beverly Hills, but hoped for a reconciliation.

"—Gone Again, Finnegan."

He apparently moved right back again Thursday for, when he was seen at the house Friday and asked when he and Miss Velez had made up, he replied, gayly:

"Oh, the next day."

Their short separation was blamed by both on nervous irritability caused by hard work at the motion picture studios.

"We've been working too hard," they both said today. "We've never had a real honeymoon and we've decided to arrange our affairs and enjoy a nice long honeymoon in Honolulu."

Now, isn't that just too ducky!

The wear and tear on the eyes of Washington's critical fraternity is going to be something terrific these next two days. Today at noon, the Warner Brothers executives are screening "Fashions of 1934," the film spectacle that features 200 Sally Rands, garbed in 400 ostrich plume fans, and tomorrow at approximately the same hour the Loew interests will unfurl "Moulin Rouge" again, for the benefit of those who missed the trade showing at the Palace recently. "Moulin Rouge" also is in the nature of one of the screen's giddier girligigs. Now we know why we were prompted to order two pairs of glasses instead of only one! One of them is bound to crack up under the strain!

Dancer Comes to Town.

At the age of 5 this ambitious youngster won first prize at a Coney Island Mardi Gras with her imitations of Charlie Chaplin. She later appeared in pictures with her father and, still later, took part in several of Marie Dressler's early films.

Always eager to become a dancer, she took up toe and acrobatic work at the first opportunity and at 16 joined a vaudeville troupe organized by C. C. Pyle for one of his transcontinental tours. On this Pyle barnstorming, cross-country hike she became so tanned by the sun that United States Immigration authorities stopped her trying to reenter the States from Mexico, because they mistook her for a Mexican attempting to beat the law!

For some time she was a Chester Hale girl with the Capitolians at the Capitol Theater, New York, and later appeared in several Paramount short subjects. When the original Four Rhythm Queens returned to America from a tour of Europe, she joined the act and has been with it ever since, having played in practically every State in the Union.

The young woman in question is Bobbie Deva, who by an odd coincidence, happens to be the sister of master John E. Pierotti, artist, whose sports cartoons appear in The Post under the signature of "JEP." So now you know.

To facilitate the planning of your seat buying, when Cornelia Otis Skinner appears at the National the week of Feburay 12, in her unique character sketches, she will present "The Loves of Charles II" on Monday, Friday and Saturday nights and at the Wednesday matinee. She will give "The Empress Eugénie" on Tuesday and Thursday nights, and "The Wives of Henry VIII" on Wednesday night and at the Saturday matinee. Each sequence will be preceded by a group of Miss Skinner's original shorter sketches.

Maxine Steps Out!

Those who heard Maxine Doyle on the "Hollywood on the Air" radio hour, Saturday night over station WMAL, were astonished to hear a young singing comedienne who can hold her own with any whose tricky songs go on the ether.

The former Earle Theater mistress of ceremonies revealed a glib command of difficult lyrics—which she pronounced in the best Hawaiian manner, according to those who profess to know—and sang two numbers that were greeted by as much applause as any on the program, not excepting Boris Karloff's reception and Mr. Karloff, the "Frankenstein" of the picture of that name, was the honor guest of the evening.

New Contract.

Among other surprises connected with Maxine's radio "appearance" was the announcer's disclosure of the fact that she was particularly happy that night by reason of just having signed a new contract with Warner Brothers as one of their new screen starlets.

When the ingenuous Miss Doyle left the Earle last September 1, for the Coast, she was signed to a six months' contract by Charles R. Rogers, independent producer, releasing through Paramount. There were option clauses enough in the document to make it continue for a period of years, if desired.

Under this agreement, Maxine has been popped into pictures and withdrawn time after time, without any appreciable advancement of the career she has so eagerly anticipated. Her most important bit to date has been a few brief scenes in "Baby in the Icebox."

Under the new Warner contract—assuming that the announcer knew what he was talking about—it is highly probable, her work being what it was on the air Saturday night, that Maxine will begin to go places and do things.

She deserves no less.

When George Gershwin, the American composer - pianist, opened his concert tour in Boston, Symphony Hall was sold out. The audience remained until 6:30 while Mr. Gershwin played encores. He was recalled 20 times, according to reputable report. Succeeding engagements in Toronto and Cleveland were no less heartily greeted. Harry Askin, Gershwin's manager, who presents him in Constitution Hall, February 8, with the 40-piece Leo Reisman Orchestra, also reports that James Melton, the radio tenor, who was heard recently at the Earle, has proved a distinct success with his cowboy songs and Negro spirituals.

The Winnah!

Gayety

"LAUGHLAND GIRLS," Wilner Wheel presents a new burlesque show in two acts, starring Georgia Sothern and Agnes Nichols, with Billy Foster, Leonard Kramer, Dave Rose, Jackie Burns, Charles Dane, Frances McEvoy, Bebe Tobin, Evelyn Murray and Maxine Breazeale. Staged by Allan Gilbert. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Georgia Sothern came, and in one swell swoop took Washington's first afternoon girl-show fans for the kind of a ride that firmly established the undulant and gyratory dancer as one of burlesque's ace queens, to be numbered among the Ann Corios, Hinda Wassaus and the relatively few others whose fame is common knowledge.

What a girl—and what a number! It was easily the bill's one interval of superlative sensationalism.

Second to La Belle Southern, and only slightly less vivacious and torrid was Agnes Nichols. Others contributing the details that one goes to the Gayety to see are Frances McEvoy, Evelyn Murray, Bebe Tobin and Maxine Breazeale.

Of Miss Breazeale especial mention must be made. Jimmie Lake pilfered her from the Monumental City last week. Her work yesterday more than justified the colonel's judgment and constitutes yet another swell reason for the weekly visit to Ninth street.

Featuring the comedy portions of the two acts, Billy Foster and Leonard Kramer are in character, with Dave Rose doing the straight. Their skits are not so hot, but this week any male players would only be considered as "among those present," anyhow, so what matter?

Charles Dane does a considerably better job of singing than is customarily heard over the footlights or from the loud speakers, and it would not be particularly surprising if he—as well as Miss Breazeale—were to become, in future, a rather regular attraction at the Gayety.

Jackie Burns does a little singing at the outset of the bill, and a second-act dance. Besides her specialty, which was tossed into the bill at the last moment, Miss Murray plays the feminine straight.

But when everything is said and done, it all boils down to Miss Sothern. So spontaneous and enthusiastic was her reception yesterday that Manager Lake is acceding to popular demand and future audiences will see her twice as frequently, if not actually more of her.

A good show from start to finish, embellished by a dancing chorus that is about the best of the Wilner lot to date.

A Newcomer to Screen Eminence

4 Premieres Are Presented By Symphony

Kindler's Offering of American Works Is Cheered.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Premieres bristled on the program of yesterday afternoon's concert by the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall, with four American composers making the alien Chaikovski seem lonesome in his isolation. Conductor Hans Kindler gave the first performance anywhere of two "Montana Sketches" by Edward Potter, the first performance in orchestral form of LaSalle Spier's two-piano piece, "Impressions of the Bowery," the first American performance of Templeton Strong's "Chorale on a Theme by Hassler," and the first performance in Washington of John Powell's "Rhapsodie Negre," with the composer as soloist.

To make the record complete, other data may here be appropriately added. Mr. Powell was recalled six times after his brilliant solo part in his own work; Mr. Spier was obliged to rise five times to bow acknowledgement from a box; Mr. Potter was brought to his feet three times by continuous applause, and Dr. Kindler was summoned back thrice at the close of the concert to receive thanks for an interesting program and for his admirable reading of Chaikovski's "Francesca da Rimini." It should be stated, too, that Dr. Kindler conducted from memory, with the exception of the Powell rhapsody.

"Chorale" Is Teutonic.

In keeping with its thematic subject and its form, Mr. Strong's "Chorale" has a strong Teutonic tinge in its harmonic investure. Without losing his individuality, the composer is in the good company of Weber and Wagner much of the time. The work has dignity and effectiveness, and the variety of color obtained from the strings alone is notable. Mr. Strong's preference for classical traditions sounds in every measure.

Mr. Potter, for many years a metallurgical engineer, modestly avers that he is only an amateur of music and that he writes for the mere pleasure of fitting counterpoint against point. That retiring demeanor makes his accomplishments the more striking, and many a professional musician may well envy him his skill in instrumentation.

The two numbers from his suite, "Montana Sketches," playing yesterday are frankly descriptive, and evoke successfully the feeling of spacious landscapes. "In the Forest" begins with an atmospheric passage for violas, suggestive of the soughing of wind through tree-tops, and this theme spreads and broadens through the strings until the whole forest becomes an Aeolian harp. The middle section has pastoral implications in the use of woodwinds, after which the forest resumes its musical mourning.

Brisker Movement.

"Wind Over the Prairie" has thinner texture and brisker movement. Here the ambient air croons its own swift song as it sweeps through coulees and springs over the rolling hills. No barriers obstruct its freedom, and its chant is exultant.

John Powell's "Negro Rhapsody," although a novelty in Washington, surely had a familiar sound to many of the auditors, for it has been since 1821 one of the most frequently played of American works for piano and orchestra. The composer still remains its supreme interpreter, as he domonstrated in his splendid performance.

As a piece of technical writing, the rhapsody need fear no comparison with any similar composition. It is strong, tensely knit, and vitally animated. As an expression of the racial subconsciousness, it stands head and shoulders above most attempts that have been made to sublimate the Negro idiom in music. Its energy is tremendous, and its artistic integrity unimpeachable.

Mr. Spier's "Impressions of the Bowery" has the virtue of being modern without eccentricities or straining after originality. It is deftly scored for its descriptive effects of the clattering "El," bursts of music from dance halls, and echoes of Oriental modes from Mott street. The middle section, suggestive of the glinting East River bearing cargoes to far whares, has nostalgic charm.

The entire program was played with precision and elan in a manner worthy of the approval which the audience accorded it. It is a pleasure to note the growing flexibility and responsiveness of the orchestra as a whole; its artistic stature is increasing visibly from week to week.

Wakefield Plans Depend on Survey

Proposed Restoration to Include Dredging.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Further restoration of Wakefield, the birthplace of George Washington, near here, is foreseen in the announcement by Secretary of the Interior Ickes of the allotment of $500 of PWA funds for a survey to determine the practicability of such a project and its probable cost.

The proposed work would include the dredging of a channel from the Potomac River through Popes Creek to what was originally the front of the estate, where it is planned to construct two stone jetties and a wharf for yachts and small craft.

This would provide an approach to the mansion similar to that existent in colonial times, when the frequent impassability of the roads made the waterway the principal route of commerce.

Fair Undecided In Virginia City

Fredericksburg Date Set but State's Oldest Event Unsettled.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—If the Fredericksburg Fair is held at all this year, it will be September 18, 19, 20. These dates were tentatively set by the Virginia Fair Association, but local officials have not decided whether to hold the fair. None was held here last year for financial reasons.

Other fair dates set include: State Fair in Richmond, week beginning October 1; National City Fair, Washington, date not decided; Culpeper County Fair, September 3, 4, and 5; Orange Fair Association, date undecided.

The fair association supported the parimutuel racing bill now before the General Assembly, arousing some interest in this section as Fredericksburg because of its central location has been recommended as the site for one of the largest tracks in Virginia.

This city has the oldest fair in the State, it having been inaugurated in 1738 under a quaint statute which provided that a fair should be held here twice a year and that all persons coming to and going from the fair should be exempt from arrest for two days before and two days afterward.

One Expert To Supervise School Food

Divided Responsibility for Lunches to End, Says Dr. Stanley.

Milk and Fruit Added to Diet; 4,000 Need Nourishment.

With milk and fruit added yesterday to the free lunches provided for Washington's 4,000 undernourished school children, plans were under way to place the entire project in charge of one expert, who probably will be a St. Paul woman.

Definite announcement of the identity of the expert was withheld by Dr. Louise Stanley, head of the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, who was named chairman yesterday of a special committee on phases of the program.

Other members of the committee are Capt. Louis Webster, Quartermaster Corps, U. S. A., designated by Maj. Gen. John DeWitt to cooperate with District officials, and Mrs. Mary Lindsley, manager of the Dodge Hotel.

Dr. Stanley said at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference yesterday that one person will be appointed to organize the preparation and distribution of all school lunches.

Responsibility Split Up.

"The trouble has been," she said, "that responsibility for providing the free lunches has been divided."

An abandoned schoolhouse on Wisconsin avenue, between R and S streets, has been selected as headquarters. The lunches will be prepared there and distributed throughout the District.

CWA workers, carpenters and others will be put to work immediately, remodeling and reequipping the abandoned school. Women CWA workers will help in the kitchen.

The ultimate object of the program, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday, should be provision of school lunches in all schools for all children.

"Those children whose parents are able to do so," she said, "would pay the actual cost of the food. Others would not pay, but all would receive the same lunches, and only school officials would know who was paying and who was not.

"This is as important in rural communities as in cities. I have seen children provided with money for lunch buy cake, candy or pickles, instead of the kind of food they should eat."

Mrs. Roosevelt said, however, that under the universal system she favors children should not be forced to eat lunch in school and pay for it in that way unless they so desired. The idea was not to institute compulsion, she said, but a general improvement in the health of the children, together with keeping the cost at a minimum.

A Nonprofit Basis.

The plan for the District will be to provide nourishing food on a nonprofit basis, Dr. Stanley said. Surplus supplies in the hands of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration will be utilized.

A District-operated central kitchen has been determined upon instead of the present private contract plan, Commissioner George E. Allen said yesterday.

Large cooking containers will be borrowed from the Army, although Army kitchens will not be used, and when remodeling of the headquarters schoolhouse has been completed, 60 women will be transferred from CWA occupations at sewing centers to provide personnel for the central kitchen.

Dr. Stanley said yesterday that both quality and quantity of school lunches needed to be improved, but that blame for inadequate menus heretofore provided should not be placed upon the delicatessen proprietor who has been furnishing the food.

"He served what he was ordered to serve," she said. "the trobule arose from divided authority."

4,038 Need Lunches.

As to which children shall be provided with lunches under the present plan, Dr. Stanley said this would be left for the time being to the judgment of the teachers. The latest report from Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, is that 4,038 Washington school children need the proposed nourishing free lunches. The number is growing daily as reports reach Haycock.

It is possible that after a central authority has been established, a committee may be appointed to investigate home conditions to determine the needs of the children.

The advisory, fact-finding committee, of which Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke is chairman, will make its final report Thursday, after which much of the committee's work will be turned over to the Parent-Teacher Association.

Col. Hutton's Burial Today in Arlington

Funeral services for Col. Paul C. Hutton, Medical Corps, U. S. A., who served in Washington for four years following the World War as chief of the hospital division in the office of the surgeon general, will be held today in Arlington Cemetery.

Col. Hutton died Saturday in Chicago. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sallie B. Hutton, of Brooklyn; two daughters, Miss Sarah Hutton and Miss Julia Hutton, and a son, Paul C. Hutton, jr., United States vice consul at Bombay, India.

Registration for Adult School Classes Is Begun

CCC Camp Here and Relief Agencies to Furnish Most Pupils.

Intensive recruiting was begun yesterday for members in the new classes in adult education, a CWA project made possible by the appointment of special teachers, under the auspices of the Board of Education.

Records late yesterday revealed more than 100 persons had enrolled at the two principal school centers where courses will be conducted.

Classes at Webster School will be held in the daytime, while sessions at McKinley School will be at night. The heaviest bloc of students, 75, yesterday registered from the Civilian Conservation Corps now stationed at Benning.

Teachers Taught Routine.

More than 50 prospective scholars have registered at the Webster headquarters.

New teachers, who went through a preliminary routine yesterday, immediately got busy surveying localities from which new material might be recruited.

Eight teachers are on the faculty of McKinley's special school. Six of these will teach illiterates to read and write, and two will conduct classes in shorthand and stenography. At Webster there are also eight teachers, six for reading and writing and two for business instruction.

Registration, Dr. Stephen E. Kramer announced yesterday, is possible in the daytime at Webster School, and Monday, Wednesday and Thursday nights at McKinley.

Many From Relief Rolls.

Many of the adult pupils will come from the District relief agency rosters, and will represent many nationalities. The Transient Relief Bureau is expected to furnish its quota, as well as the various agencies for destitute and homeless boys.

Additional schools where adult instruction will be given are Abbot, Central, Hine and Roosevelt.

Schools for colored classes have been announced as Birney, Giddings, Syphax, Bell, Francis, Burrville, Cardozo and Washington.

Meanwhile, personnel of the nursery centers and schools established under the CWA fund was completed yesterday, with headquarters in the National Child Research Center. Engaged for this work are 10 regular teachers, 10 nurses and 10 dieticians, who will supervise food served children in their care.

Military Engineers Elect Col. Oehmann

District Building Inspector Named President.

Col. John W. Oehmann, commander of the 121st Engineers, D. C. National Guard, and inspector of buildings for the District, has been elected president of Washington Post, Society of American Military Engineers, it was announced yesterday.

The election was held in the Army and Navy Club following a luncheon. Col. Oehmann addressed the gathering on "Building Operations and Inspections in the District of Columbia."

The meeting also was addressed by Lieut. Col. F. B. Wilby, of the Engineer Corps. Many prominent civilian and military engineers attended. Other officers are Lieut. Col. Glen Edgerton, vice president; Capt. Victor Martin, secretary-treasurer, and Col. J. M. Wright, director.

B. & O. Rate Value Set at $655,138,100

I. C. C. Fixes Schedule as of June 30, 1918.

(United Press.)

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday fixed valuation of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for rate-making purposes, as of June 30, 1918, at $655,138,100, which includes $22,144,545 working capital.

The Commission placed the total value of owned and used properties at $356,250,000 and properties owned but not used, which were leased to other companies, at $1,387,487, and properties used but not owned and leased from other companies, at $241,694,981.

Virginia Budget Set for Joint Hearing Today

School and Liquor Issues Also Due Discussion in Assembly.

Richmond, Jan. 29 (AP).—Chairman Ashton Dovell of the House appropriations committee today announced a joint hearing on the $82,000,000 budget with the Senate finance committee tomorrow night.

Mr. Dovell and Senator W. A. Garrett, chairman of the Senate committee, utilized a comparatively light day to plan expeditious procedure for schools, liquor and the budget.

All three of these items, and the administration's $1,000,000 tax increase program, will have their day tomorrow. The State monopoly liquor dispensary bill is set for a special and continuing order in the House. The new tax program and schools are inseparably linked in the omnibus tax bill before the Senate committee. And Mr. Dovell today revealed that more will be said on the subject of schools in the first joint hearing.

Assembly Marks Time.

The Assembly today largely marked time. The Senate advanced to their third reading of the Cather bills reorganizing the attorney general's office, and the lieutenant governor signed the Rogers-Hollerman bill abolishing the Hopewell Corporation Court. The governor said today no one had urged him "not to sign the bill."

The Senate advanced to its third reading, also, the Senate economy committee bill providing for changes in public school textbooks every seven years instead of five.

A short-lived verbal skirmish preceded the advancement of the attorney general bills. Senators Wright and Apperson objected to a committee amendment providing that assistants to the attorney general could not engage in outside practice of law. Senator T. Russell Cather, patron of the bills, argued for the committee amendment, which prevailed when the opponents were outvoted.

Authorize Eight Assistants.

The bills authorize the employment of eight full-time assistants for the attorney general, two at $5,000 a year each, four at $4,000 a year each and two at $3,000 a year each.

The Senate committee on insurance and banking reported a House bill by Delegate Frank Moore, of Rockbridge, allowing conversion of stock insurance companies into mutuals. The upper house general laws committee spent most of the afternoon considering an egg-grading bill by Senator Laymen. After some discussion, action on the bill was deferred by the committee until its meeting next Monday.

The courts of justice committee spent several hours working on a score or more bills pertaining to court procedure.

Virginia House Likely to Pass Rum Bill Today

Delay on Senate Approval Seen; Revenue Split to Be Pressed.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 29.—Prompt House passage of a State dispensary system liquor control bill was predicted tonight by Chairman Wilbur C. Hall of the finance committee.

The measure will be considered tomorrow as special order of business. Hal said the bill would survive debate without major modification. He reiterated there was little chance for success of anticipated amendments intended to permit whisky sales in hotels and restaurants.

After House approval, Senate action on the bill probably will be delayed pending a finance committee report. The hotel and restaurant fight will be renewed by a committee member, Senator Aubrey Weaver, Front Royal.

Eggleston Asks Split.

Senator John W. Eggleston, Norfolk, announced he would sponsor an amendment to give political subdivisions three-fourth of the liquor revenue, estimated at $1,650,000 annually.

Administration leaders, however, have indicated they will seek passage of the bill without mention of revenue distribution. They plan to offer a separate measure to reserve all liquor income for the State.

Cities and towns, Eggleston insisted, will be forced to provide greater police protection after sale of whisky is legalized. He contended the expense should be borne by liquor.

Meanwhile, the Senate advanced to third reading a bill by Senator Trussell Cather, Winchester, to abolish special counsel in separate departments and concentrate legal talent in the attorney general's office.

Would End Duplication.

The author argued the proposal would prevent duplication and cause salary economies. He successfully defended a provision to prevent assistant attorneys general from representing private clients.

A measure to prohibit changing of textbooks in public schools except at seven-year intervals also was advanced to third reading.

Senator Robert O. Norris, jr., economy committee chairman, introduced a bill to reduce by 25 per cent fees paid sheriffs and jailers for boarding prisoners.

Board Plans Rum Permits As Big Stick

Allen Denies Permission for Liquor Imports at Once.

License revocations rather than imposition of fines for infractions of regulations governing liquor sales is favored by the District Liquor Control Board, which yesterday visited Commissioner George E. Allen to discuss its policy.

The board, consisting of George W Offutt, Mrs. W. Beverly Mason and Isaac Gans, was closeted with Commissioner Allen for a half hour. The Commissioner informed the board he is going to insist upon strict enforcement of the law and urged severe punishment for violators.

Earlier, Commissioner Allen denied a petition of liquor wholesalers that they be permitted to bring stocks of liquor into the District before licenses are issued, to avoid delay in deliveries after the licenses are granted.

"Illegal, Unnecessary."

After a conference with Assistant Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, Commissioner Allen informed the petitioners their request was not only illegal but unnecessary. Wholesalers, he said, may obtain their liquor stores two weeks in advance of the retailers, because applications for retail licenses have to be published for two weeks before they are granted.

The form of surety bond to be posted by all licensees was approved by Commissioner Allen and sent to the Government Printing Office.

Application forms for license seekers were approved yesterday, and it is planned to have them distributed after requests are received by mail. They will be available to applicants Thursday.

House approval of District estimates for enforcement of the liquor control law until June 30 is expected tomorrow under unanimous consent following favorable action yesterday by the deficiencies subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee.

Act on Part of Estimate.

The subcommittee acted only on that portion of the District estimates of $87,000, which is to be expended during the remainder of the fiscal year. This amounted to $23,034 for the Alcohol Beverage Control Board and $3,613 for the three assistants in the corporation counsel's office.

No objection to the estimates was raised at the subcommittee hearing and no obstacle to immediate control is anticipated.

The District subcommittee will consider the other $60,000 estimates along with the regular District 1935 budget in about two weeks.

No decision has been made regarding the appointment of the liquor board staff and no selections will be announced, Commissioner Allen said, until the funds become available to start operations. No protests have come to him, he said, over rumors that three out-of-town men would be appointed as assistant corporation counsels.

"I couldn't say whether the men are to be appointed from Washington, the State of Washington or Chillicothe," he said.

Caution Prevents Suicide With Gas

Rooming House Proprietor Turns Off Supply.

Gustave A. Dunshee, 50, of 1222 N street northwest, probably owes his life to the caution of Louis R. Shaffer, proprietor of the rooming house in which he lives.

Shaffer found Dunshee in his tightly sealed room, a gas tube in his mouth, early yesterday. Smelling fumes the evening before, Shaffer told police, he went to his basement and turned off all the gas in his house.

A fire rescue squad ambulance rushed Dunshee to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said his condition was serious. Dunshee, an employe of the Potomac Electric Power Co., had written two letters, one of which was addressed to his wife, at 1254 Tenth street northwest.

Farewell Aire Rules in City High Schools

1,325 Await Registration After Graduations End Tomorrow.

The hail and farewell motif prevailed in Washington's high schools yesterday as junior and senior institutions in the District prepared to graduate 1,769 white students today and tomorrow, and add 1,325 freshmen to their rolls.

Numerous students who will receive diplomas are expected to return to classrooms for postgraduate work. Ample accommodations for these are available despite reduction in funds, Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou announced yesterday.

From the junior high schools alone 1,125 students will be graduated who will enter regular high schools. In addition to these, 200 elementary school children will be promoted directly into high school.

Roosevelt will graduate 100 students, McKinley, 140; Central, 200; Eastern's four-year class, 100, and three-year class, 32, and Western will graduate 72.

In the junior high schools, Eliot will graduate 80, Gordon, 150; Langley, 171; Jefferson, 61; Macfarland, 121; Paul, 128; Stuart, 130; Deal, 80; Hine, 130, and Powell, 64.

Graduation exercises for the three-year class of Eastern and the four-year class of Roosevelt will be held tonight. Exercises at Eliot, Hine and Macfarland Junior High Schools will be held this afternoon, while Langley Junior graduates will receive their diplomas this evening.

Exercises at Eastern for the four-year class, at McKinley and Western High Schools, and at Deal, Gordon, Jefferson, Paul, Powell and Stuart Junior Highs will be held tomorrow.

Speakers Announced.

The Central class will be addressed by Thomas E. Green, of the American Red Cross. Dr. De Witt C. Croisant, of George Washington University, will address the four-year class at Eastern; Ralph W. Frame, president of the Eastern Home and School Association, the three-year class, to which Frederick W. Pimper, of the Commercial National Bank, will present diplomas.

Roosevelt graduates will be addressed by Dr. Elmer S. Jeuyser, of George Washington University; and the Western class will be addressed by Dr. J. M. M. Gray, new chancellor of American University.

Although there will be no speaker at McKinley, Superintendent of Schools Ballou will present diplomas there and a program will be presented by class members.

Stern Sued on Notes For Total of $12,500

David L. Stern, 1412 I street northwest, was named defendant in five suits, all involving allegedly overdue promissory notes, in District Supreme Court yesterday. The total involved is $12,500.

Those who sued and the amount claimed are: Jennie M. Tower, Brooklyn, N. Y., $1,500; Mabel L. Leet, Bethesda, Md., $2,500; Louis P. Darrow, 1423 Iris street northwest, $1,500; Anna V. Bowsher, 325 Fifth street southeast, $4,500, and Elizabeth B. Buckingham, 1314 Monroe street northwest, $2,500.

Channel Plan Due Approval In Committee

Modified Development Up for Hearing Today.

$1,650,000 Project Has Favor of District Civic Bodies.

Favorable action on a modified plan for developing the Washington Channel by the House Rivers and Harbors Committee is expected following an open hearing today in Room 1304 of the New House Office Buildings.

Contrary to the attitude of District agencies and civic interests expressed at a hearing last session on a more ambitious development proposal, local interests favor the new plan and desire its authorization by Congress, though without immediate appropriation from District funds.

Would Cost $1,650,000.

The modified plan, as proposed by Maj. J. D. Arthur, jr., United States engineer for this district, would cost $1,650,000, against $3,692,000 recommended last year. The District engineer suggests the District be required to pay $389,000 of this amount over a period of 8 years. The remainder of the cost, he said, should be borne by the Federal Government.

The board of engineers for rivers and harbors of the War Department has taken the view, however, that Federal participation in the project should be only to the extent of half the cost. Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of Army engineers, in submitting the report, declined to suggest how the cost should be allocated.

The new Arthur plan provides for increased yachting facilities and construction of only five piers as against nine in the former proposal. It omits the item for improvement of Water street and for construction of a bridge connecting with East Potomac speedway.

Maryland-G. U. Agree to Resume Relations in Football, Basket Ball

Pact Signed By Capital Colleges

Grid Game at Maryland Nov. 24 Revives Rivalry After 28 Years.

Basket Ball, Baseball Games for 1935 Arranged.

DORMANT for 28 years, one of Washington's oldest and most colorful football rivalries—Georgetown vs. Marylandyesterday was revived by the swift, deft strokes of a pen gliding across a contract at a meeting between representatives of the two schools. The game will be played November 24 at College Park.

Though negotiations for the resumption of athletic relations between the schools were conducted by H. C. (Curley) Byrd, vice president of Maryland, and H. Gabriel Murphy, Georgetown's graduate manager of athletics, George H. Pollock, acting graduate manager of athletics, signed the agreement in behalf of Maryland. Byrd, however, was present at the meeting.

Rumors Long Heard.

Discussion concerning a resumption of relations between the schools has been rife during the past two years, but news leaking out about ten days ago that they contemplated a 1934 football game came as a distinct surprise to the sporting fraternity. Rumors that Maryland had rejected the proposal were heard, and subsequently denied by its board of athletic control last week.

The agreement is for a single game, but if Maryland can find a suitable date on its 1935 schedule they are almost certain to clash again, and it is probable that the game will become the District's biggest annual grid attraction. Basket ball and baseball games for 1935 have been arranged.

Issue Statement.

At the conclusion of yesterday's meeting the following joint statement was issued:

"Georgetown University and the University of Maryland are gratified to announce that their respective football teams will meet on November 24, 1934, at College Park. Both universities feel that this game should be the beginning of a long and pleasant relationship in all branches of athletics.

"Some delay in making this announcement has been occasioned by the fact that the University of Maryland has certain commitments for 1935 which may prevent a football game in that year. However, basket ball and baseball contests already are scheduled for 1935.

"The athletic managements of the two universities are in perfect accord in the matter of eligibility."

Maryland's board of athletic control issued a statement through its secretary, Prof. J. E. Metzger, as follows:

"The football game scheduled next fall between the University of Maryland and eGorgetown University is to be a part of an elaborate program to celebrate the third State of Maryland. Georgetown's acceptance of the invitation to take part in this program is not only pleasing to the University of Maryland but very fitting, in that the Jesuit Order, founders of Georgetown University, had a large part in the founding of Maryland and in its early history.

"The board in connection with the game, feels that it owes a duty to Georgetown to state defintely that it has held no meeting since before the Christmas halidays and that the scheduling of the game received the unanimous vote of the board at the first formal meeting at which the game was discussed."

Cooper Posts $1,500 At Doping Hearing

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Bond of $1,500 was posted today by Harry Cooper, race horse owner and trainer from Vancouver, B. C., at a hearing before a Federal commissioner on narcotic possession charges.

Cooper recently was permanently barred from all Florida tracks by the State racing commission after State and Federal agents raided his home in Hialeah and found a quantity of narcotics, hypodermic needles and alleged formulas for "doping horses."

Hack Wilson Foresees Great Year—for Wilson

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—At this writing Hack Wilson, who hits baseballs hard and far, is dead set against any hacking of his salary, but he thinks everything will be all right soon.

He also is of the opinion this season will be a big one for Louis Robert Wilson, outfielder for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The chunky ball player, who was the National League home run king when he was with the Chicago Cubs in 1930, admitted today "no agreement has been reached" with the Dodgers on his 1934 pay check.

"Yeah, it was a little cut they offered."

Wilson said he figured the papers will be signed in time for him to travel along with the other Dodgers to Orlando, Fla., March 10.

20-Second Kayo Ends British Bout

Cardiff, Wales, Jan. 29 (AP).—Jack Peterson, British heavyweight champion, scored the quickest knockout in local boxing history tonight when he put Charlie Smith down within 10 seconds after the opening bell for their ten-round match.

Yanks Linked With Trade Reports

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (AP).—Approach of the interleague meetings next week, offering major league owners a final chance for a bit of bolstering here and there before spring training starts, has shot new life into the trade rumor markets.

The 1933 champions, the Giants in the National League and Washington in the American League, seem certain to stand pat on what they have, along with the Athletics, already the life of the winter party, the Cubs, Cardinals and Pirates.

But aside from these six there isn't a club in either league that won't listen to reason, far apart as all managers always are on a definition of the word.

Yanks Seek Blacholder.

The Yankees lead today with rumors of a trade with the Browns, strengthened by the fact that Louis B. Von Weise, St. Louis president, spent the past week-end here. The only logical reason for the visit seems to have been dickering with Ed Barrow, Yankee business manager.

The Yanks still are after George Blaeholder, Browns right-handed pitcher, who has spent almost an entire major league career being sought by the New York management. In the Yankee side of the barter, which has been threatened all winter, the names of a couple of shortstops, Lyn Lary and Frank Crosetti have been mentioned, along with pitchers Red Ruffing and Danny Macfayden. All are considered trading material in the Yankee quest for a reliable right-hander and an able-bodied, hitting outfielder to aid young Been Chapman and the aging Babe Ruth and Earle Combs with the Stadium pasture patrol.

Red Sox Overstocked.

Jimmy Wilson, new manager of the Phillies, has indicated he'll listen to offers for his big first baseman, Don Hurst, and more offers will be made for Cincinnati's Chick Hafey, whether or not Larry McPhail wants to listen. The Red Sox have six able-bodied left-handed pitchers, headed by Robert Moses Grove and Rube Walberg, who are not on the market, but some of the others offer the means whereby Boston's need for more punch in the infield can be satisfied.

If the Cleveland Indians trade, the Yankees probably will get Earl Averill, whom they crave, but the price in players and cash is certain to be high. Joe Stripp, Brooklyn third baseman, is reported on the block, and the Braves, needing infield batting strength to be dangerous this year, are interested in him, as well as Hurst, of the Phillies.

Dodgers Desperate.

With Brooklyn all stirred up over Bill Terry's insult—the Giants' manager naively asked recently if the Dodgers were still in the National League—almost anything may happen along the banks of the Gowanus.

Bob Quinn, business manager of the club, was absent from his usual haunts today and he might have been talking to Bill McKechnie, of the Braves. Boston could use several of the Dodgers, particularly First Baseman Sam Leslie, Second Baseman Tony Cuccinello to replace Rabbit Maranville, or the first holdouts of the year, Hachenschmidt, Wilson and Al Lopez, the Spanish catcher.

The man who traded all these out of Brooklyn might just as well go along with them for his own safety, however, the temper of the Brooklyn faithful being what it is.

One fan, wishing to be of assistance, wrote Quinn suggesting a solution of the Brooklyn problems would be to send Leslie and a second string catcher to Boston for Wally Berger and Ed Brandt, the one a great outfielder, the other a star southpaw, a deal in which Manager McKechnie also would get apoplexy.

$30,000 Gate For Knight Bout Seen

Champion Is Training Faithfully; Experts Pick Georgian.

MIAMI, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Maxie Rosenbloom and Joe Knight, who wouldn't lure $10,000 worth of customers in New York, are likely to play before a $30,000 house when they meet for the world's light-heavyweight title in Madison Square Garden arena here Thursday night.

Already the fight has taken in more than $10,000 at the box office, and Garden officials predict a gross of treble that amount will be reached unless the weather breaks the wrong way.

Francis Albertanti, chief of the Garden's publicity staff, who has been in command for the past fortnight, was joined today by Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, Garden president, who flew down from New York.

Both in Condition.

Col. Kilpatrick visited both training camps and came away enthusiastic over their apparent condition.

"If they don't put up a good fight it won't be because they're not ready to go," he said. "I was particularly impressed with Rosenbloom's appearance."

Rosenbloom, incidentally, has trained faithfully for the Knight bout, just as he always does when the title is placed on the line. Rosenbloom may use night clubs as training sites for most of his bouts, but he always gets into perfect shape when he's risking the title. Knight holds a decision over Maxie, but it was scored in a nontitle affair.

Reasons for the apparent interest in the light-heavy title bout are easy to find. Miami is crowded this season with people vacationing, and they are spending well. Champions seldom show in this sector, and the local fans are going to see one as a matter of curiosity. Possibly the greatest reason is that Knight has, in part at least, succeeded the late Willie Stribling as the Southern boxing idol. His home is in Cairo, Ga., not far from Stribling's native Macon.

Knight Has Backers.

For all of Rosenbloom's string of successes when defending his title, there are many boxing men who believe he'll hold it for the last time when he steps through the ropes to go in against the left-handed Georgia cracker. This is largely due to Knight's recent record of seven victories in his last seven starts. Among the victims were Joe Banovic, Bob Godwin (twice), and Lou Scozza.

Rosenbloom's purse will be the biggest he has seen in a long time. He's been guaranteed $15,000. Knight is working on a percentage of what's left after Rosey takes his cut.

Skate Title Kept By Sonja Henie

Maribel Vinson, of U. S., Third in Competition.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 29 (AP).—Maribel Vinson, the graceful little Boston skater who will carry America's colors into the world figure skating championships at Oslo next month, today had to be content with a third place in the European title figures. Sonja Henie, of Norway, successfully defended her title.

Miss Vinson gave a brilliant performance at the two-day tournament and was barely edged out for second place by the Viennese youngster, Liselotte Landbeck, newcomer to senior skating.

Miss Henie, still far ahead of other women competitors, easily took first place.

Miss Vinson was third behind Miss Henie and Fritzie Burger, of Austria, in the Olympic figure skating at Lake Placid two years ago. She won the United States title for the sixth time at New Haven, Conn., last March.

Thil Defeats Seelig.

Paris, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Marcel Thil, veteran French claimant of the world middleweight championship, tonight won a 12-round decision over the promising German boxer, Erich Seelig. It was a nontitle bout. Thil weighed 161 pounds; Seelig, 159.

Jump Record In Danger Saturday

Marty and Spitz Compete at Garden; Tie in 1933 Nationals.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (U.P.) Those two human grasshoppers, Walter Marty and George Spitz, will launch a joint attack on the world indoor high jump record Saturday night in the Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden.

This competition will be the first of four big indoor meets this winter, in which Marty, of California, world outdoor record holder, and Spitz, of New York, indoor record holder, will jump.

Secretary Dan Ferris, of the A. A. U., believes that one of them will better Spitz's record of 6 feet 8½ inches before the season is finished. They are slated to compete also in the Boston A. A. games, the New York A. C. meet and the National championships.

Marty on Scene.

Marty, a tall, slender, blond senior from Frenso State College, arrived today to finish preparations for his indoor debut in the Millrose Games. He made a few practice jumps in the New York University Gymnasium with Spitz. Although these two jumpers have been keen rivals for six years, Marty never competed indoors before.

They first became bitter competitors when juniors in high school. Officials of the A. A. U. had difficulty in deciding between the two for the outstanding high school jumper that year. Marty was selected over Spitz because he was making 6 feet 4 inches consistently at the time. Last summer, the Frenso youth established the new outdoor record of 6 feet 8⅝ inches.

Later last summer they competed in the National outdoor championships at Chicago. They tied, each making 6 feet 6 inches. That was their last meeting.

Bostwick's Chenango Out of Grand National

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—Almost coincident with word from New York that George H. (Pete) Bostwick would not ride in the Grand National, came the announcement today that his horse, Chenango, had been scratched from the steeplechasing classic at Aintree.

Ivor Anthony, trainer, of Chenango, did not give any reason in announcing the decision, but it was believed that the heavy impost of 170 pounds saddled on the horse was the deciding factor.

Chenango had shown good from in hurdle races this season and was well fancied for the classic. He has not raced, however, over such formidable obstacles as cross the Grand National course.

The New Rassling Code

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (Spl.).—The New York State Athletic Commission has ruled that a rassler, whom we shall designate as "A" so as not to hurt anyone's feelings, may not leap from the floor and kick another rassler whom we shall call "B" for the same reason, in the face with both feet. This is the maneuver known as the "drop kick," or the "American savate," and was employed chiefly by a party known as Jumping Joe Savoldi, one of the regulation union rasslers.

Joe has never been a very good rassler, so he had to fall back upon something novel and spectacular to make up for his lack of erudition in the classic sport. He discovered that if he leaped into the air like a Russian ballet dancer and planted both tootsies on the matting spread over the chests of rival rasslers, and the rival rasslers fell down moaning, groaning and writhing, the customers all sat up and said, "O-o-h, he's killed! Hooray!"

I do not believe that any rassler ever was injured or even discommoded by having Savoldi wipe his feet on their chests and the customers seemed to derive a great deal of pleasure out of witnessing this feat. However, it has always been the functions of sports commissions to make an occasional survey of what the public likes and enjoys and then have that stopped.

I mean New York now has simply become a community where a man can not get a drink standing up at a bar and can not see a rassler kicked in the face with both feet. Wonder how the law is in Jersey and Connecticut? Every so often I simply have to see a rassler kicked in the face. It's like opium, or peanuts, or strong coffee.

The new rassling code issued by the athletic commission also places an interdict on the playful gesture in which Rassler "A" picks up Rassler "B," lugs him around the ring by the handles and finally chucks him at the head of some newspaperman or bill collector or business rival whom he happens to spot in the audience. Here again the audience is deprived of a pretty spectacle, and a good deal of the joy is taken out of the game for the rassling reporter.

It was thrilling to sit at the ringside of the bouts in Madison Square Garden and never know where your next rassler was coming from. It kept us reporters up on our toes, eager, alert, keen, active, on the job. Before the practice of rassler-throwing became popular, it used to be our custom to bring newspapers, periodicals, even novels or our homework into the ringside to while away the weary hours while the performers groaned and moaned and sweated through their routines.

We were not particularly derelict in our duties, since it was all cut and dried anyway, and just before the big flopperoo would begin every one would put away his paper or crocheting and say—"Here it comes. This is the beginning of the end," and would pay strict attention.

Then one evening, a young man who was reading a large-size newspaper at the ringside suddenly found himself looking into the bearded visage of Man Mountain Dean, who had been thrown out of the ring and right through the center spread of his newspaper, by Jim Browning, or Don George, or Ed Lewis, or one of those guys. A little later a scribe who was working a cross-word puzzle was flattened by the arrival of another big mass of flesh and the panic became general.

As the wrassler writers became more wary and "wrassler-shy," as we used to call it, it became a great game with the wrasslers to see whether they could catch a writer napping, or nodding, or off his guard and belt him with his opponent. Well, all of that is over now and I regret the passing of a noble sport.

Of course, I know what really lies behind the order. The way the seats are set up at the wrassling bouts, General Phelan, chairman of the commission, occupied the chair directly behind my working press seat. Now I do not wish to brag, but the truth is that I was always the favorite target of the wrasslers, who never lost an opportunity to chuck their partners at me.

So adroit did I become at dodging them eventually that I had them judged to the fraction of an inch, could pretend to be reading, or cleaning my finger nails, or balancing my cheque book, or any of the myriad little things one can find to do at a wrassling match, and then with the spring of a tiger, suddenly leap aside as the body came flying through the air, pulling my chair away as I did, with all the grace of a matador twirling his cape. The result was that the wrassler would then land in General Phelan's lap. As long as I was catching them for him there was no squak. As soon as he began to catch them, wrassler-throwing was legislated against. Things like that breed revolution, General Phelan. . . .

Penn-Michigan Sign Two-Year Grid Series

Philadelphia, Jan. 29 (AP).—A two-year, home-and-home football series between the Universities of Pennsylvania and Michigan, beginning in 1935, was announced today by Penn. The first game will be played at Ann Arbor, Mich., on November 2, 1935.

In announcing the resumption of gridiron relationships for the first time since 1917, Dr. E. Leroy Mercer, dean of the department of physical education at Penn, said the series was arranged in response to "an insistent demand on the part of our Midwest graduates for a game with the University of Michigan."

The Penn-Michigan series began in 1899. In 13 encounters, Penn won seven and Michigan was victorious four times.

Central and Roosevelt To Battle

Western, Yearning for First Victory, Faces Crippled Tech.

| | W. | L. | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Central | 4 | 1 | .800 |
| Eastern | 4 | 1 | .800 |
| Tech | 3 | 2 | .600 |
| Roosevelt | 1 | 3 | .250 |
| Western | 0 | 5 | .000 |

Games Today.

Roosevelt vs. Central.
Western vs. Tech.

Games Friday.

Central vs. Tech.
Roosevelt vs. Eastern.

CLASHES in the interhigh basket ball title race today show Central battling Roosevelt in the opener and Tech meeting Western in what promises to be mere formalities along the front.

Devoid of spectacular upsets since the inaugura. tilt, in which Tech outnosed Eastern, the popular preseason choice, 34-30, something may bounce out of these strictly formality meetings that are on tap today.

The Ruf Riding Roosevelts, with Jimmy Cavanaugh and Mario Geraci playing their last games, may rise to the occasion and deal out some sort of an upset, with the Central team holding the bag.

Ruf Riders May Surprise.

Roosevelt has been losing too easily, barring, of course, the game with the lowly Westerns, and the Ruf Rider five may produce the wallop today that will upheave the gentle standings of the clubs.

Jimmy Cavanaugh, Ruf Rider guard, who is at present runner-up for scoring honors, will make a determined bid for the leadership today. The flame-topped Roosevelt athlete has been averaging better than 11 points a game, and today, his last in series competition, will give him an excellent chance to do his bowing out of the picture with glory.

Buddy Nau, of Central, who has been playing so-so basket ball the last two games and who was the big shot against the Ruf Riders in the first battle between the two rivals a month ago, is the lad who must be stopped today if the Roosevelt hopes to upset the dope.

Crippled Tech may find Western anything but soft in their battle today. Should Coach Cliff Moore use orthodox methods in running his club against the Technicians, the bare possibility of winning a game in 26 series starts may be a reality.

Judgment Questioned.

Against Central last Friday, the Western court mentor broke up a winning streak combination after his team was far in front of the Mount Pleasanters, and when the Central marksmen began getting "hot" on the Western basket, Moore failed to resort to his first stringers, but whipped the second stringers about in an effort to stave off the Central rally. And you can't win ball games that way.

Rally by Eastern Beats G. U. Preps

Lincoln Parkers Break Tie to Win Out, 37-31.

Eastern High School knocked off a scrapping Georgetown Prep basket ball team yesterday on the Eastern floor, 37-31.

The Lincoln Parkers, displaying a quick-scoring outfit, shot into into the lead at the very outset of the game to run up a 15-7 count at the end of the first quarter. However, the Hoyettes came back strong to outscore the Eastern courtmen and knot the score at the half, 16-all. In the third period the lead see-sawed back and forth, with neither team showing more than a 2-point advantage, and the two were tied at the end of the period, 25-all.

In the final session, the Eastern five began to click in spectacular fashion, looping the leather from all corners of the floor and winning the game handily. Allan and Keating, of the Preppers, divided the high scoring honors of the game.

Middletown Booters Close to County Title

Frederick, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.). Thurmont defeated Frederick in the county soccer league on Cadet Field, 3 to 1. After both sides scored a field goal, the Mountaineers clinched the game on a penalty kick by Earl Creeger.

Brunswick easily defeated Emmitsburg at the former place, 7 to 3. The Railroaders won in the first period on field goals by Fitez Burch and Shipes. With the game in hand, Brunswick took matters easy in the final period.

Middletown continued its winning streak by defeating Jefferson, 5 to 0. After the valleyites made one field goal in the opening round, Jefferson rallied and the game was even the remainder of the period. Middletown came back fast in the final period and scored four goals.

The games closed the second half schedule, with the exception of the tilt between Middletown and Mount Airy at the latter place next Sunday. In the event Middletown wins, the season will close with Middletown the title holder of both halves.

Chance Flight Repeats at Hialeah as Rush Carries Him From Last Place

Luck Against Night's End In Feature

Mrs. Whitney Sees Her Alaric Beat Juveniles by 4 Lengths.

HIALEAH PARK, Jan. 29 (AP).—J. J. Bauer's Chance Flight, which recently won at a mile over the Tropical Park racing strip, kept his Florida record clean when he ran a remarkable race to win the featured Granada Purse of 6 furlongs here today. Apparently hopelessly out of it in the early running, the gelded son of Chance Play ran over the field in the stretch to score by a half length. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Night's End, suffering bad racing luck, was second, another half length before A. A. Baroni's Cash Surrender.

Chance Flight was a $4.70 for $2 choice in the field of ten 3-year-olds. He completed the three-quarters of a mile in 1:12 1-5.

The stewards suspended two jockeys five days for rough riding; W. D. Wrgiht for his ride on Cash Surrendtr in the fifth race, and O. Harbort for his handling of General Court in the sixth.

Night's End was in close quarters most of the trip. He was pocketed and forced back at both turns.

Cash Surrender ran Chiliad into defeat in the first half mile and opened up a good lead in the stretch. Night's End, although forced back at the far turn, got free finally and rushed into second place, but neither he nor Cash Surrender could stave off the sensational bid of Chance Fight in the final drive. This fellow, almost last on the far side, overtook the field on the outside and got up just in time under Lee Humphries' hard urging.

Fair Joan Graduates.

Joseph E. Widener's first victory of the Florida season materalized when his filly, Fair Joan, easily outran ten other maiden 3-year-olds in the 6-furlong opener. Johnny Gilbert rushed the $3.20 favorite away fast at the break and the daughter of Haste never left the result in doubt. Clonard was second throughout, but was three lengths back passing the wire. Curling was an easy third. A poor start deprived Bernie K. one that drew a fair share of the play, of much chance.

Mrs. Payne Whitney arrived here today from her Georgia winter home in time to see her promising 3-year-old, Alaric, score impressively in the "baby" race. Alaric was the second odds-on choice to register, the gelding returning $3.70. Silvio Coucci had the son of Wildair well out in front all the way and his mount won by four lengths from Prosecutor, the one to offer most contention. Jugador lost the place by three lengths.

Chrysmute Easy Winner.

Chrysmute, well handled by Jimmy Hunter, easily accounted for the third purse, beating Flying Gypsy by a length and a half. Barkantine was third, a length behind. Flying Gypsy dashed to the front, but Hunter, rating Chrysmute second to the far turn, shot the ultimate winner into command around the bend and the filly drew away. Barkantine made up ground fast in the final quarter mile. Chrysmute returned $7.70.

Taunton was a paddock tip that made good in the fourth contest. The colt drove home by a length to pay $8.60. Jockey Haines rode judiciously on the winner, rating his mount along with Off Duty, the favorite, until the latter stopped entering the stretch. Taunton drew away and held Bert Lahr safe. Bert Lahr beat Off Duty by three lengths for second money.

Jimmy Hunter earned a double aboard the well-backed Pat C, which was in front from flagfall to finish of the sixth event. Pat C., paying $6.80, won by only a neck, but he was in hand. Spud had no trouble beating the others, having 4 lengths to spare over Storie Martin. The latter was favorite and was driving hard to save the show.

Fingal, $5.50, nosed out Raccoon in the last race. Fairly Wild was a close third.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The plebeians, who were the common people of Rome, staged the greatest strike any nation ever knew when, in the fifth century B. C., they walked out on the ruling patricians. They aimed their walkout against the then existing laws—and they won their point.

Rome was ruled by the Senate, a political body of 300 men chosen by the consuls of the patricians, or ruling class. The common people, or plebians, were barred from office and political power. Laws proved so oppressive that in 494 B. C., the common people decided to walk out on the patricians. A general strike was called, and everybody started to march out of the city to start a new one of their own—and to leave the rulers with nobody to rule but themselves.

With no alternative, the patricians gave in to the people's demands—they gave them the right to be represented by the "tribunes" with the power of veto over the acts of any magistrate. Other reforms to follow gave the commoners the right to intermarry with the upper class, the right of an assembly of their own, and other advantages. All in all, the strike was a big success.

The Bosphorus, a strait 18 miles long connecting the Sea of Marmora with the Black Sea, is constantly flowing—but strange as it seems, it flows both directions at the same time. In the center a rapid current runs into the Black Sea, while at the sides another current runs in the opposite direction.

Miami Bans Ray; Horse 'Stimulated'

Trainer and Three Charges Ruled Off Track.

Miami, Jan. 29 (AP).—The stewards of Hialeah Park today announced they had found evidence that a horse trained by Nat Ray had been "stimulated" and that Ray and the horses he trains—Heroson, Stealingaway and Kiltamond—had been ruled off the track.

The racing commission's chemists, Ashby and Morgan, reported that the findings of a saliva test taken on the horse Kiltamond, which finished third in the first race opening day, proved to be positive. Ray's case has been referred to the Florida State Racing Commission.

At the Post . . .

Hialeah Race Track, Jan. 29.

Dear Al:

Clocker Mike has returned and all is forgiven. In fact, I didn't even have to look for him. You know I banished him from the Bennings camp for being a jinx and told him he could return the first day I was shut-out. Well, that happened and I invited him back. He said he would return the first time I picked three winners. Today Fair Joan and Chrysmute stepped home for me, so I went down on the rail to root Taunton to the finish. There was a fellow in front of me in a checkered suit. When I could get a glimpse of the field over his shoulder, I saw Taunton battling it out with Off Duty. At the sixteenth pole Taunton drew away. Just then the fellow in the checkered suit swung around and said: "What you say boss?" It was Mike with a hungry look in his eyes, something that was proven beyond a shadow of a doubt some two hours later. BILL.

First race—David W., which found racing legs over at Tropical Park, gets the call in the opener. This is a wide-open affair, with at least seven horses a few points apart. Grayback gives only a steadying impost despite his good record and will be dangerous. God o' War will like the 7 furlongs and has an outside chance of getting home.

Second race—Idle Victory made a sensational debut and shapes up as the best of the baby racers in this puddle jump. Synod for the place and Black Birder to show.

Third race—North Mill appears to have found himself. That last effort was a beaut and off it he figures to outrun this brand. The sleeper may be Longford. He has some class, but gets a trifle too much weight. Claremont to outfoot the others.

Fourth race—I'm going to give Aunt Flor, lightly weighted, a crack at the main money in this mile. Clocker Mike gave me the low-down on this filly. Perhaps he's wrong. Of course, Bickering and Flaghorn are the ones to defeat.

Fifth race—Gold Step and Jockey Porter appear to be the winning combination in the feature race. The weight is about right. The Pelican turned in a whale of a race the other day but that may have been a flash in the pan. Feudal Lord is as good as he will ever be. Third for him.

Sixth race—Blessed Event has two straight tucked away. Meets about the same kind in this and I see no reason for a slip up. Sabula defeated some fair ones here and deserves the place ranking ahead of Sea Fox.

Seventh race—Resisting was a well-meaning horse last out but had none the best of the racing luck. Going to try to make him beat Village Vamp. The latter disappointed as the favorite. Brass Monkey for third.

Virginia Lists Winter Grid Practice

Players, Except Those on Other Sports Teams, Report Friday.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Fred Dawson, Virginia's head coach of football, will direct winter practice during February in preparation for the 1934 gridiron season.

The decision to start the drills next Friday was made at a meeting attended by many of the men who will be candidates for the varisty eleven next fall. Coach Dawson talked the situation over with his men and they voted to carry out four weeks of off-season preparation throughout February.

None of the men who are out for places on Virginia's varsity and first-year winter sport teams in boxing, basket ball, track and swimming will be called upon to take part in the gridiron drill.

Work on Fundamentals.

Coach Dawson expects to devote most of the period to drill in fundamentals of blocking, tackling and charging. A few simple plays may be worked out later in the month, and there may be a few light scrimmages in the final week.

Virginia has a difficult gridiron schedule next fall, with games against the Navy and Dartmouth as well as against five members of the Southern Conference and other neighboring rivals.

Three Southern Conference titles in boxing, swimming and tennis will be decided at the University of Virginia during the winter and spring.

Friday and Saturday, February 23 and 24, are the dates of the annual boxing tournament. This will be conducted for the eighth time in the Memorial Gymnasium. The following week-end will see the swimming championship decided in the gymnasium pool. The date of the tennis tournament here will be set later.

Cheers Fall on Shocked Ears Of Hockey Ace, Waiting Jeers

BOSTON, Jan. 29 (AP).—Take it from Eddie Shore, a man who knows, cheers sound much sweeter than jeers.

That Boston hockey star, who drew a 16-game suspension for his part in the Irvin "Ace" Bailey accident, returned to action against the Rangers last night and was given one of the wildest ovations in the history of professional hockey by a packed house in New York.

"To tell the truth," Eddie said today, "I was a little bit worried about the reception I was going to get. New York hockey fans always greet me with a storm of good-natured booing, and when I stepped out onto the Madison Square Garden ice I expected to get the usual greeting.

Difficult to Realize.

"As soon as I came through the gate the crowd went wild, and it was several seconds before I realized the fans were cheering me.

"What a reception! What great sportsmen those New York hockey fans are! Why, they cheered me to the rafters every time I made a move, and how they yelled when 'Ching' Johnson flattened me. It was great. I'll never forget them. I've been around hockey a long time, but I've never heard the like of it.

"I could understand if I was having a good night, but I wasn't. The long lay-off ruined my timing and I wasn't sure of myself until the third period. Physically and mentally I was OK. I felt great and didn't have any worries but, being shy of practice, my judgment of distance, my 'touch' wasn't quite there. I'll be much better tomorrow night when the Rangers come here."

Changes Style of Play.

It was noticed that Shore changed his entire style of defensive play against the Rangers. He appeared to be playing the puck instead of the man and seemed to be leaning backward trying to avoid a penalty.

Eddie, however, says that this change was unintentional and will not be permanent. "I tried hard to treat every invader in my usual fashion and when I failed, it was not because I didn't want to check but because the Rangers wouldn't wait around until I lined them up. But that one game helped a lot and I'll probably be able to handle Frank Boucher, the Cook boys and 'Ching' Johnson in better fashion tomorrow night."

Bristol College, High Fives Busy This Week

Bristol, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Basket ball teams of King College and both local high schools will see action this week, but of the three the collegians face by far the most difficult assignment, taking on three tough opponents. The Bristol (Va.) High School quintet will play twice and Bristol (Tenn.) High Schools once.

Inactive for two weeks because of the midwinter examinations, the Kayseeans will jump into the thick of the Smoky Mountain Conference fight, taking on the East Tennessee State Teachers here Tuesday night and the Maryville College Highlanders here Thursday night. Climaxing the most difficult week of their entire schedule, they will journey to Emory Friday night for a tilt with Pedie Jackson's Emory and Henry Wasps, nonconference opponents.

The Virginia High School quintet will journey to Bluff City Tuesday night to repay an early season visit of the Sullivan County aggregation, and Wednesday night will play host to the Piney Flats outfit, another team with which they have already clashed this season.

Only one game has been booked this week for the Bristol (Tenn.) High School team, that with Gate City (Va.) High School there Saturday night, but it is likely that another will be scheduled.

Coach Shake-up Sought By Indiana's Alumni

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 29 (AP).—Led by Judge Ora L. Wildermuth, a trustee of Indiana University, members of the Lake County Alumni voted for a complete shake-up in the athletic situation at the university.

The alumni demanded a new director of athletics and an entire new football coaching staff.

Two Sons, $39; Wins New Orleans Feature

Fair Grounds, New Orleans, Jan. 29 (AP).—The little-favored Two Sons, who gets his name from the fact that the identity of his father is in doubt, today galloped to a nose victory over Informal in the fifth and feature race to pay off at the nice odds of $39.40 for $2.

Well up all the way, Two Sons raced gamely through the stretch to push his nose past that of J. W. Frye's filly. Gilbert Elson was third, a short distance back.

Agua Caliente Draws Elite Of Links

$20,000 in Prizes Draws Shute, Goggin, Wood Across Border.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Jan. 29 (AP).—Golf's conquistadors crossed the border today into Tia Juana Valley to get the feel of the Agua Caliente course before they start shooting for the richest purse of the Western tournament season.

In the half-dozen previous championships, a number of the Nation's best golfers have failed to annex any appreciable share of the $20,000 prize money.

It appeared, however, that this group, including Denny Shute, British Open champion; Ralph Guldahl, runner-up to the National Open title; Willie Goggin, finalist in the National P. G. A tournament, and Craig Wood, leading money winner of 1932, was at last rounding into top form.

Young Players in Form.

But so was the group of young players which has been causing the champions and near-champions of other years so much trouble.

Shute, whose wood shot timing has been off, has collected less than $500. Wood, winner of $4,000 in prize money and three of the West Coast titles last winter, has received slightly more than $200. Guldahl's share to date has been less than $100, while Goggin's cut amounts to $540.

MacDonald Smith and Tom Creavy stand out pretty much alone among the seasoned campaigners who have collected in the gold parade. Smith's earnings approximate $2,150 to head the list, with Paul Runyan and Creavy gathering in approximately half that much.

The Agua Caliente course represents the most severe test on the winter tour. Its 6,838 yards demand endurance and its rugged fairways and closely trapped greens put a premium on accuracy.

Unbeaten Teams In Center Battle

The undefeated Trinity and Saranac fives meet at the Central Gymnasium tonight in perhaps the most important game in the first half of the Community Center League's basket ball schedule. A win for the Saranacs will clinch for them the first-half championship, but should they bow to Trinity, the latter team will still need a win over the Bureau of Investigation, which they play later.

Cardozo Beats Dunbar On Goal by Marshall

Marshall's brilliant shot from a difficult angle, with seconds to play, broke a 17-all tie between Cardozo and Dunbar High School quintets yesterday on the Cardozo court to give Cardozo the victory, 19 to 17.

The game was hard fought througout, the defensive work of both teams being of outstanding character, with Tobias proving particularly effective.

Stocks Capture New High on Industrial Lead

List Climbs 1.5 Points as Leaders Mount; Sales, 2,799,150 Shares.

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Stocks climbed to a new 1934 average high today under leadership of the industrials.

Closing at 88.9 the composite of 90 issues went through last week's top and was up a point and a half net. The industrial section finished at 100.8, compared with its July peak of 102.1. Rails were strong in spots, while utilities lagged a bit; both these divisions still have some distance to go to reach their summer highs.

With commodities advancing from the start, stocks began with a selective market in which various specialty groups, mostly those associated with staples, were featured. In the last hour, however, buying broadened. Final prices approximated the highs, with net gains of 1 to 4 points plentiful. Transfers totaled 2,799,150 shares.

On Rising List.

Rubber, metal, motor, farm implement, tobacco, mail order, aircraft, steel and a miscellaneous assortment of low priced issues picked up considerable momentum.

Some carriers were up a point or two, but activity was greater in other directions. The market's ability to resume its advance after the hesitancy of late last week was naturally noted in Wall street and bullish professionals wondered whether the summer high for the industrials constituted an attainable objective at this time.

Trade news was stimulating. Passage of the gold bill by the Senate and the measure's progress to the White House, where prompt announcement of dollar devaluation was expected to accompany Presidential approval, could hardly have surprised the markets, although traders doubtless bore in mind that the chief aim of these new monetary steps in to help staples.

Inspiration for Rubber.

Rubber futures and shares seemed to have caught their inspiration from reports that output restriction was being agreed on at Amsterdam; most of the stocks rose fractions to around a point. Wheat's advance came in the wake of a cold wave. Cotton traders heard talk of possible crop control, and also noted strength of other markets.

Steel operations have again picked up, notwithstanding sluggishness of rail and construction buying. Equities of the leading companies became active and strong when it was reported that the operating ratio had improved rather substantially. The Iron & Steel Institute's estimate was 34.4 per cent of capacity, up 1.9 points for the week to a new high since this organization began to release weekly figures late last October. United States Steel, Bethlehem, National, Republic and Vanadium gained 1 to 2 points.

United States Steel preferred halved a 2-point decline. Directors meet for dividend action on that issue tomorrow and the now familiar 50 per cent payment is expected. At the same time, the company's 1933 financial statement will be released.

Wright Aero Gyrates.

Wright Aero still gyrated, but in a narrower range and quieter trading. It was up about 8 at the best, holding only a point. Curtiss Wright and Douglas traded briskly for fractional net gains.

The House Naval Committee voted favorably on a bill involving 1,184 new planes. Motors remained prominent on prospects for first-quarter sales, General Motors selling at 40 for the first time since 1931.

Mail order and chain store stocks were helped by cheerful news of sales improvement. Socony-Vacuum was an active oil, crossing 18. Its directors meet soon for dividend action; three months ago they resumed disbursements with a 25-cent payment.

American Telephone, which has been quiet, picked up nearly 3 points and retained 1¾ of its rise. U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Motor Products, Electric Auto-Lite, Westvaco Chlorine, Sparks Withington and Thompson were strong spots.

Sterling exchange topped $5, a rise of around 6 cents, the assumption being that dollars had again been sold abroad for gold purchase operations. Washington reports intimated that $5.10 for sterling would be a level acceptable to this country, at least for the interim.

Meanwhile, current indications are that initial devaluation for the dollar will be to 60 per cent of the old parity, the value given it by the official gold price of $33.45 an ounce, which has not been changed since the President disclosed his plans.

Vote on Silver Amendment to Gold Bill Indicates Real Courage Will Be Required to Prevent Return on Old 16-to-1 Ratio.

By Ralph West Robey.

As a forewarning of what possibly is ahead of us the vote on silver in the Senate on last Saturday is worthy of careful attention. It did not presage with complete certainty that something more will be done for silver, but it was the strongest indication in that direction we have had. Whether it is followed up probably will depend almost entirely upon how rapidly prosperity and higher prices are attained by other means. If business activity does not increase markedly and prices quickly advance by a large percentage, it is clear from this vote that we shall have silver introduced into our monetary system in large quantities before we get through with our monetary experimentation.

When it was first announced, several days ago, that a silver amendment to the gold bill would be introduced it generally was assumed that it had little or no chance of passage. Even the proponents of the measure took this attitude. Suddenly on Saturday, however, it became apparent that there was an immense amount of strength on the silver side—enough to indicate passage. The first question raised then was whether it could pass the House. According to cloakroom gossip a hasty survey indicates that it could. It becomes necessary, therefore, to get the amendment defeated in the Senate, or the President would be faced with the alternative of either vetoing the whole monetary bill or accepting a mandate to buy a huge amount of silver.

Measure Stopped by Statement of President's Views.

The defeat was accomplished by having Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, make the bald statement that the President was opposed to the measure, feeling that the time is "inopportune" for such legislation. Because of this statement, again according to cloakroom gossip, and perhaps also as a result of more personal pleading, at least three Senators changed their votes from "yea" to "no." The final vote, it will be recalled, was 45 to 43—an incredibly narrow margin by which to defeat a return, in effect, to a 16 to 1 silver-gold bimetallic monetary system.

This, however, is only part of the story. The important thing is what is ahead of us. We have had defeats of silver by narrow margins before and still kept our monetary system intact and held the silver Senators at reasonable bay. The real question now confronting us is whether we shall be able to continue this success or whether we, by one move, shall retrogress a century in the handling of a monetary system.

As indicated above, it seems to me that the first consideration in this regard is the speed with which we get higher prices and better business from other means. If we do there is at least some chance that the pressure for "doing something more for silver" will diminish. On the other hand if these results are not attained with speed the pressure almost Certainly will increase. In this case there is only one means to prevent the enactment of a 16-to-1 silver bill. This is for the President to put a stop to his endless currency experiments and give us a monetary policy that is not altered by new compromises every few days.

Record Does Not Indicate President Will Be Firm.

Unfortunately there is nothing in the record of the President on monetary policy that indicates he will do this. During the last year he has made concessions, experiments, and compromises without end. He pledged himself to defend the gold standard at all hazards and then suspended it without, at least in so far as the general public could see, lifting a finger to save it. He adopted a gold-buying program and announced that it was a policy and not an expedient, and within a few weeks asked Congress to give him $2,000,000,000 with which to "stabilize" the value of the dollar. He publicly announced allegiance to what could be only the "commodity dollar" and then asked for power to limit possible variations.

On the basis of this there would appear to be little basis to expect the President to oppose with any real vigor a strong political demand for "something more for silver." Already he has compromised with them and ordered the Treasury to buy all newly mined domestic metal at an artificial price. Perhaps he will go no further. If he does not intend to, however, he will have to show more fight than the mere statement than this is not the opportune time. In a word, he will have to make a final decision in his mind on whether we are going to have something deserving of the name monetary system, or a mere hodgepodge that grows out of experiments and political concessions.

Bonds Break Calm to Begin New Advance

Standstill Since Wednesday Yields to Gains; Sales $15,299,000.

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—All listed bond groups displayed a firm front today in trading that was steady but not too lively.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues advanced two-tenths of a point, its first movement in any direction since last Wednesday. The sales total of $15,299,000, par value, was about the same as that of Friday.

Although U. S. Government securities were relatively quiet—transfers here amounted to only $1,700,000—gains ranged from two-thirty-seconds to twelve-thirty-seconds of a point. Treasury 3⅛s had the largest turnover, accounting for nearly half of the aggregate. They were up ten-thirty-seconds for the day, and were almost 2 points above their recent low.

Rails Take Lead.

The rails were the best of the corporation groups.

Gainers in this section of 1 to 2 or more points included some liens of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, Chicago & North Western, Erie, International Great Northern, Louisville & Nashville, M-K-T, Morris & Essex, Norfolk & Southern, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Wabash & Western Pacific.

Denver & Rio Grande General Mortgage 5s dropped 2 points following decision of the road's directors to defer February 1 interest payment. This issue, however, closed above its low of the day.

Waterworks Are Active.

Railway operating revenues for the 12 months of 1933, however, showed a decrease of $1,346,795 from the previous year, the report said.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway reports December net operating income of $1,070,145, against $1,224,270 a year ago.

| | 1933 | 1932 |

Wool Markets.

Boston, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—(U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.)—Increased demand for medium quality fine wools recently has come largely from knitters, who for some time have been out of the market for raw wool. An improvement in the market for knitted goods has been reflected in a revival of interest in wool suitable for knitting purposes, but purchases as yet have been rather light.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during week ended January 27, amounted to 421,500 pounds, compared with 171,700 during the previous week.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—In a rather idle session, profit taking in most sections caused an easier tendency on the stock exchange today. German bonds, transatlantic issues and Argentine rails were resistant for a time, but drooped with other issues later. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Prices on the bourse reacted favorably to the change in the government. Most stocks advanced, especially rentes. The closing was irregular.

Curb's Prices Climb on Lead Of Specialties

Metals and Alcohols Ease; Sales Volume Rises to 380,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—The curb market closed higher today with the bulk of improvement accounted for by specialties. Utilities were firm but metals and alcohols failed to join the advance. Scattered gains occurred in oils.

Initial dealings were a trifle irregular but prices soon steadied. The list continued to gain and trading broadened at the start of the last hour. Final quotations were around the best of the day.

Safety Car Heating soared 6½ points and Axton Fisher, Novadel Agene and General Tire & Rubber finished up around 3 each. South Penn Oil firmed nearly 2 points but improvement among other petroleum shares was fractional. Fisk Rubber gained a point in active trading, coincident with the buying flurry in that group on the big board.

Issues closing around 1 to 2 points higher included American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Ford of Canada A, Montgomery Ward A, Ruberoid, Pan-American Airways and A. O. Smith. Newmont Mining ended unchanged, but Hiram Walker dipped a shade.

Transfers approximated 380,000 shares, compared with 307,000 for last Friday.

D. & R. G. W. Road Delays Bond Interest

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—The $745,000 interest payment due February 1, which the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad has postponed, is on $29,808,000 of general mortgage 5 per cent bonds due in 1955. The next important interest date of the company is July 1.

J. S. Pyeatt, president of the road, has been asked to confer with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on construction of the Dotsero cut-off, a project to be financed with Government funds. The RFC has been represented as desiring the company to speed construction.

Wheat Jumps On Scare of Crop Damage

Maximum of 2½-Cent Rise Follows on Buying; All Grains Up.

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—Something akin to a crop scare developed in the wheat market today, hoisting values 2½ cents a bushel to the highest point since November last.

Maximum prices of the day were reached during the final transactions in wheat, with purchasing much broadened chiefly as a result of increased apprehension that serious damage to the United States winter crop had been done by a sudden steep fall of temperatures catching practically all sections bare of any protecting blanket of snow.

Wheat Closes Strong.

Wheat closed strong, 2 to 2½ cents above Saturday's finish; corn, ⅛ to ¾ up; oats, ⅜ to ⅝ advanced, and provisions showing 10 to 17 cents gain.

Eastern buying of wheat assumed large proportions as the day drew to an end. Earlier, the rise of quotations was halted at times because of profit-taking sales and on account of apparent reluctance of speculators to take hold of the market in aggressive fashion.

A good deal of variety of opinion as to ill results of the cold wave served temporarily to retard the price advance, an idea being prevalent in various quarters that the extent of damage this season from cold might or might not exceed the usual average.

Damages to Wheat.

Later, belief among most wheat traders became pronounced that serious injury had been done to wheat vitality both in soft and hard wheat sections, especially soft wheat. Experts said the harm came not so much from low temperatures themselves as from the suddenness with which the change had taken place from conditions that stimulated plant growth and rendered wheat unusually susceptible to injury.

Persistent dry weather complaints with reports of dust storms in parts of Kansas today were also a factor, as well as talk that assured passage of the gold bill with virtually unlimited possibilities in the direction of credit expansion would focus public attention on commodities.

Corn and oats reflected the strength of wheat and prospective increased feeding demand because of low temperatures.

Provisions were responsive to Government buying of lard.

Steel Plants Undaunted by Failure to Rise

Industry Still Looks Ahead for Broader Demand and Upswing.

Cleveland, Jan. 29.—Undismayed by the failure of steelworks operations to continue upward last week, the industry still looks forward confidently for broadening demands to supply a fresh impetus shortly, states the magazine Steel.

Unexpected curtailment, due to delay in railroad and automotive tonnages, interrupted the upward sweep of operations for the first time this year, the average rate declining 2 points to 33 per cent last week, with indications that this week it will continue at this level, or advance.

In the automobile industry, steel stocks acquired late last year are less of an obstacle to new purchases than difficulties still encountered with the mechanical features of new models. Manufacturers have in hand orders for 200,000 cars and without exception are striving to bring production up as rapidly as possible. Ford has released 10,000 tons of sheets; General Motors' specifications also have been rising moderately, accounting for some improvement in mill operations.

Delay of Railroads.

With railroads, the delay is due chiefly to two factors: First, reluctance to purchase rails and pay interest charges in advance of the time when the rails can be laid; second, details involved in Federal financing; and the task of tabulating bids.

Washington NRA officials have issued an amendment to regulations governing public work, which may tend to retard awards to contractors and indirectly steel buying. In projects in which Federal funds are to be used, all work must be done and all materials produced either under specific trade codes, or where no codes exist, in accordance with the President's reemployment agreement. Structural shape awards for the week rose moderately to 14,925 tons.

It now appears that several hundred thousand tons of railroad car plates and shapes, chiefly requirements for the Van Sweringen lines, will not be ready for rolling until the middle of February. For these lines, 12,775 cars may be awarded this week, bids from more than 16 car builders on complete cars as well as parts still being tabulated. The Pennsylvania Railroad opens bids February 5 on 21,000 tons of rolled steel, 18,000 car wheels and 3,000 axles. John Morrell & Co., Ottumwa, Iowa, meat packers, have awarded 150 refrigerator cars.

Japan, bidding against American, British, French and German manufacturers, has taken 25,000 tons of cast pipe for Mexico City. Miami, Fla., has awarded 8,000 tons to the United States Pipe & Foundry Co. Army engineers at Kansas City, Mo., are to close on 4,000 tons of cast pipe February 2, and a Federal loan has been granted New Bedford, Mass., to buy 7,500 tons. The Navy Department has divided an order for 5,280 tons of armor plate among three producers.

Increasing attention is being given to finished steel prices, but except for a reduction in stainless steels, action is being deferred. An advance in sheets and strip prices is regarded as a probability.

Further increases in scrap prices are noted at Chicago, but the rising trend in progress for the past two months has leveled off. Pig iron shipments are improving, aided by better automotive foundry schedules.

Operations Up for Week.

Steelworks operations last week advanced 5 points to 64 per cent at Cleveland, and 1 to 30 at Chicago. They dropped 33 points to 46 at Detroit; 5 to 32 at Youngstown; 2 to 22, Pittsburgh, and 1 to 23½, eastern Pennsylvania. New England remained at 86; Wheeling, 34; Birmingham, 52; Buffalo, 32.

If increases scheduled for this week in eastern Pennsylvania, Youngstown and Buffalo are realized, and Chicago, Cleveland, Wheeling, Birmingham and Detroit districts remain steady, they will more than offset the anticipated declines in the Pittsburgh and New England districts.

Steel's London cablegram states British tin plate manufacturers fear some mills will be forced to close, owing to deprecation of the dollar.

Steel's iron and steel composite is unchanged at $32.43; and the finished steel composite, $51.10. Scrap is up 4 cents to $11.54 from the adjusted composite of last week.

France Called World Leader In War Force

(Associated Press.)

France, stirred deeply by Germany's withdrawal from the disarmament conference and resignation from the League of Nations, has probably the world's premier military establishment.

Although Russia has a larger active land force and three times as many men in its trained reserve, military experts rate the French army a considerably stronger war machine due to its superior artillery and training and its better supply system.

On the basis of numbers of well trained and equipped land fighting forces, Italy probably ranks second to France in military effectiveness.

Latest figures available at the war department show France has an army of 607,000 actives and a trained reserve of 6,328,000 men while Italy has 457,000 active and 6,017,000 reservists. The Soviet actives number 848,000 and the trained reservists reach the tremendous total of 18,025,000.

Spain Ranks High.

The young republic of Spain surprisingly ranks next to "the big three" in numerical strength of its organized forces, there being 209,000 actives and 2,115,000 reserves in the land once famed for its conquistadors. Then comes Japan with a total force of 2,177,000, followed by Poland, with 1,977,100.

Poland and the three nations of the Little Entente—Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia—where French influence predominates, have notably strong military establishments forming what has been called the "French ring of steel" around Nazi Germany.

The Rumanian army has 244,850 actives and 1,485,000 reservists, the Czech forces total 1,627,000 and those of Yugoslavia, 1,447,724.

Germany's army is limited by the Versailles treaty to an active force of 100,500 with no trained reserve. The French claim, however, that the Germans have been secretly rearming and that the Nazi storm troops form a formidable reserve.

Besides its famous network of fortresses along the Franco-German border, France has an air force that is by far the largest in the world. Its fighting airplanes number upward of 3,000. The Polish air force is said to be the strongest in central Europe.

The treaty of Versailles prohibits Germany from having military air forces of any description.

United States Low on List.

In trained land forces the United States and Great Britain are near the bottom of the international list. This country has 132,000 regulars and 307,000 reservists, while Britain's forces number 206,000 and 295,000, respectively. The total for the British Empire is 1,163,204, a smaller force than that of Yugoslavia.

In Switzerland, which has a remarkable record for keeping out of war, the ratio of soldiers to population is the largest in the world. There are only 494 men in the active Swiss forces but there are 629,000 trained reserves, the total force being 15.49 per cent of the population.

The French ratio of soldiers to population is 14.84 per cent; the Italian, 14.58; the Russian, 11.49; the Yugoslavian, 11.39.

India has the lowest percentage, .08. Germany's ratio is .15, that of the United States, .35 and of Great Britain, 1.20.

Garrett and Brown Study Enforcement

Col. Leslie C. Garnett, United States Attorney, yesterday conferred with Maj. Ernest Brown, superintendent of police, on law enforcement problems. After the conference, Col. Garnett indicated he would have a statement to make "as soon as some additional facts" are ascertained.

The question of enforcement of the liquor law is believed one of the subjects under discussion. Another problem is that of mapping a campaign against the "numbers racket."

Walt Mason, Himself

Great Occasion.

Let's cast all trifling things away, and thus prepare for Groundhog Day. Upon that great, auspicious morn, the soul of phophecy's reborn, the future's veil is cast aside, the doors of fate are opened wide; we know what things will come to pass; what weather will be cutting grass. It's an occasion most sublime, a fruitful and a fateful time. We have lost faith in human seers, they've fooled us for so many years; they issue almanacs and charts which are designed to break our hearts. They say the weather will be fair, and we go forth to get some air, and rainstorms wash us off our feet, or we are loaded down with sleet. They tell us winter's at an end, and Arctic blizzards then descend, and we must strip our slender roll to buy another ton of coal. We don't believe in forest lore; the squirrels can't fool us any more. They store up beechnuts by the ton, what time the summer days are done, and that's a sign, we have been told, the winter will be long and cold. The winter comes without a storm, its days are quite serene and warm. All other prophets make mistakes, and pull a lot of bonehead breaks; they're merely guessing in the dark—the groundhog only hits the mark. The groundhog, through prophetic eyes, surveys the earth, the sea, the skies, and then deserts his cozy den, or else goes back to sleep again, and leaves the people to infer what sort of weather will occur.

Cooper Opens Battle to Void Bank Charges

Colonel and Bates Warren Claim Insufficiency of Indictment.

Col. Wade H. Cooper and Bates Warren, indicted jointly on charges that they conspired to misapply $455,000 of the funds of the closed Commercial National Bank, yesterday launched in the District Supreme Court an attack upon the legal sufficiency of the indictment.

Through their attorneys, the two claimed the indictment was "vague, indefinite and uncertain" and that it failed to inform them sufficiently of the nature of the charges.

Listing 12 reasons for declaring the indictment should be suppressed, Col. Cooper and Mr. Warren asserted the true bill failed to inform them of the bank funds allegedly misapplied.

Arguments will be heard Friday before Justice Peyton Gordon. Attorneys William H. Collins and John W. Staggers represented Col. Cooper, and William E. Leahy and Edmund Toland acted for Mr. Warren.

Col. Cooper, president of the bank, and Mr. Warren, its general counsel, are charged with conspiring to misapply funds of the bank and with actually misapplying approximately $90,000. Irregular loans and the payment of stock dividends to shareholders of the Continental Trust Co., which was merged with the Commercial, form the basis for the charges.

Radio Waves and Ripples

RADIO has turned back the calendar to the beginning of the century, and Maude Adams, to the thousands who loved her then, is young again.

Daily her mail brings figures from the nearly-forgotten past. There is a note on the stationery of a New York building firm wherein its president reveals he was the boy who sold copies of the Babbie waltzes in the lobby of the old Garrick Theater when she was playing "The Little Minister," and who used sometimes to obtain her autograph.

Then there is the man who wants to know if she remembers "Buster." He rode with her in his 'teens at a New York riding academy. And several who basked in her reflected glory as members of the original casts of her productions, who have been dead, figuratively, for nearly a quarter of a century, send long reminiscences. And a storekeeper in Pennsylvania recalls her buying trees he planted around the old station at Lake Ronkonkoma, L. I., when he was station agent there.

How different this from that unfortunate stage attempt to come back several years ago. The young Maude—her voice—goes out on the air. The old Maude hides in the studio, unseen. Memory, for the generation that worshiped her, fills in details.

Gertrude Stein's opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts," will be broadcast by Columbia from the Wadsworth Athenaeum in Hartford, Conn., next Tuesday. The following is quoted from Columbia's press release merely to give you an idea of what to expect.

"Miss Stein's remarkable libretto has given rise to many interesting musical problems. In scoring the opera, Thompson found that the stage directions in the text were so punctuated as to be indistinguishable from the body of the text, but that they were unusually rhythmic and in keeping with his musical ideas. So he made them an integral part of the opera; they are sung chiefly by mixed choruses.

"The text of the libretto is typical of Miss Stein's revolutionary style. The first act opens in a garden at Abila in early spring. There is a wall and a tree. St. Theresa is seated under a tree painting flowers on very large eggs. A portion of the text follows:

"'Saint Theresa in a storm at Avila there can be rain and warm snow and warm that is the water is warm the river is not warm the sun is not warm and if to stay to cry * * *'"

These words, apparently meaningless and seemingly nonsensical are set to rhythmic and lyric melody. Other portions of the libretto, which make even less sense, form a group of liquid syllables for which a lovely musical setting is provided. Here is the text of one of the choruses:

"'Let Lucy Lily Lucy let Lucy Lucy Lily
Lily Lily Lily Lily Lily let Lily Lucy Lily
Let Lily Let Lucy Lily.'

"With little intent, therefore, to tell the story of the opera through its words, the choreography and music become increasingly important."

That, of course, changes everything, though we think it might be a good idea if Lucy were allowed to Lily, or vice versa.

Mr. Spiegel, of Kenton, Ohio, appreciates it when a station broadcasts all night as WJSV did last week.

Mr. Spiegel has a receiving set out in his cow barn which he will leave on all night if there's anything worthwhile for the cows to listen to.

Mr. Speigel writes that his cows were more contented than usual after hearing Arthur Godfrey. Probably kept them from thinking about things.

The last 15 minutes of Chancellor Hitler's address to the Reichstag today on the occasion of the first anniversary of his rise to power will be broadcast by N. B. C. WRC taking it locally. An English summary of the chancellor's anticipated discussion of German foreign and domestic policies will follow. The time is 10 a. m.

Something happened to our timetable yesterday, which must have made a lot of radio listeners pretty mad.

On WMAL, for instance, we had Amos 'n' Andy coming on at 7:15 instead of 7 o'clock and we let Orphan Annie run for an hour. Everyone familiar with WMAL's schedule quickly sensed something was wrong and as promptly called to tell us about it, putting us frightfully behind in our work. Not that we minded a bit, except that it seemed a little unnecessary after, say, the first 25 calls.

Everything on WJSV was scheduled 15 minutes late, which wasn't so bad once you got onto the system.

For the use of the publicity department, Edwin Rogers, WRC announcer, jotted down questions asked by people who called the studio while the hostess, who usually supplies the answers, was off duty the other night.

The result was rather disappointing except perhaps in the case of the young lady who had difficulty understanding why she could not speak to Eddie Cantor when she had just heard him from the station, or the young man probably looking for a friend who wanted to know if the phone number wasn't formerly that of a rooming house.

The Marine Band works into the spirit of the President's birthday ball broadcasting today with three of Mr. Roosevelt's favorites—"Home on the Range," "My Wild Irish Rose," and Mr. Woodin's "Franklin D. Roosevelt March."

George W. Offutt, chairman of the new District liquor control board, explains drinking regulations for the Capital at 6 tonight on WMAL.

WJSV is glad it can use Announcer Bob Trout and Engineer Bruce Geddes in broadcasting Lyman C. Duke, District Boy Scout executive, calling all Boy Scouts to Washington Auditorium February 10 to hear President Roosevelt's message. Both Trout and Geddes were once Boy Scouts.

Decision Nears On Southwest LandPurchases

2 Alternatives Considered by President, Says First Lady.

Uncertainty about the Government's intentions concerning property in Southwest Washington soon will be relieved, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday at her press conference.

Mrs. Roosevelt said the President is considering two alternatives:

First, continuance of land purchases if the Government building program is to go ahead in that section.

Second, if this is not done, a definite time will be fixed before which the Government will make no more purchases.

Under the Hoover Administration the Government bought up a large amount of land in the Southwest section. However, there are many other pieces in the same area which would have to be purchased if there is to be a building program.

Under the circumstances, property owners have neither been able to sell their land or make improvements, not knowing when their property might be required.

Mrs. Roosevelt said both the President and Secretary Ickes realize the situation is working a hardship on the land owners.

Dead Man's Body Identified; 3 Held

Autopsy to Seek Cause of Alley Death.

While the coroner's office attempted to determine the cause of his death, the body of a man, found early yesterday in an alley at the rear of 315 U street northwest, was identified last night as that of Chester P. Barclay 40, of 2226 First street northwest.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered an autopsy. The man was partially clad. Physicians at Freedmen's Hospital said he had been dead for some time.

The identification was made by J. R. Bland, a brother-in-law, of 608 Tuckerman street northwest. Three colored men are being held for investigation at the Second Precinct. Police said they found the rest of Barclay's clothing in a house at 2277 Eighth street northwest.

5 Hurt in $500,000 Zero Weather Blaze

Anderson, Ind., Jan. 29 (AP).—Fire destroyed one of the oldest business blocks here today, causing damage estimated at $500,000.

Fighting the blaze in near-zero weather, three firemen and two policemen were injured when they fell from ice-coated ladders. Five local fire companies, aided by a fire truck from Muncie, brought the blaze under control after six hours.
